Senator Denounces Use of 'Questionable Character . . . by Ingenious Minds'

By Edward F. Ryan
Post Reporter

Name-calling reached a bitter pitch yesterday in the Senate wire-tapping probe.

In a morning hearing Abner (Chick) Lappin declared he was told by the late Senator Josiah W. Bailey (D., N. C.): "I have reason to believe that a political prostitute, meaning Senator Brewster, is having my phones tapped."

In the afternoon Senator Owen Brewster (R., Me.) claimed the Senate floor as a matter of personal privilege to declare that a questionable character was being used to make personal attacks upon him. Said Brewster:

"A very questionable character about town, apparently well known to the police, is being used by some ingenious minds to make personal attacks upon me.

"Using the protection of a Senate Committee to secure publication in the press this utterly irresponsible character, already publicly identified as the lowest order of humanity, concerned with pandering to the vilest tastes of mankind, has qualified himself as a confidant of the late Senator Bailey of North Carolina, one of the finest Southern gentlemen that ever lived.

"The picture of Senator Bailey descending to the level of a corridor discussion with a man of this character will be beyond belief to any of his friends.

"The office of the District Attorney inquired of me some time ago as to whether I would be available to testify in a perjury charge against this character. Ample witnesses were apparently available to support the charge.

"Following this inquiry this person with no visible means of support suddenly had important business in Mexico City and returned to use the Senate committee as a shelter for the publication of his scandalous and utterly perjured testimony in the press.

"I am quite prepared to make this statement in any forum but

Barret Defines Police Policy on Wire-Tapping

Reluctant at first to discuss the subject because "I am under subpena and I will answer the questions on the Hill," Police Superintendent Robert J. Barrett yesterday consented to answer "one question" and defined this as the police department policy on wiretapping:

"The policy is the same as against any other crime—hold-up, murder, or anything else. We don't have any equipment and we don't tap any wires, not even on our big cases."

Q—(by reporter) — Is there any order against it?

A—(by Barrett)—You don't need any order. It's a violation of the law.

Q—Well, how about Shimon?

A—The grand jury heard his case and did not indict him.

WHITE HOUSE APPROVAL—The President and Mrs. Truman watched the Senators night game yesterday from the presidential box at Griffith Stadium. Kigye Lost In Battle for Port Town

By Russell Brines

Tokyo (Wednesday), Aug. 30 (AP).—North Korean Reds powered two major pushes today against a 40-mile arc defending the American advanced supply base of Taigu and the eastern anchor of Pohang.

A 20,000-man attack on the eastern end still was three miles short of Pohang, second-best port city in United Nations hands. But it gained ground last night and pushed the South Koreans out of Kigye, nine air miles northwest of Pohang. General MacArthur's spokesman today called this attack "a major effort."

The spokesman also termed "major" a push by other Communist forces about 18 miles northeast of Taegu down a road which connects with the Taegu-Pohang highway. This push is in the vicinity of Uihung. Pohang is at one end of the 40-mile battle arc, Uihung at the other.

A mid-morning communique of the United States Eighth Army said the South Korean Eighth Division, which is fighting to the east of Uihung, repulsed a 3000-man Red attack last night. But below Uihung on the highway itself, the South Korean Sixth Division had to withdraw an unspecified distance in a line-straightening operation. It also had to cope with a group of 200 Red infiltrators.

Fight Centers on Pohang

Despite this attack and a Communist minor success in the southern sector, main attention was centered on Pohang with its port facilities and nearby American air base.

Swarms of planes were giving close strafing support to protect Pohang. The defending South Korean Third Division, in positions 3 miles north of Pohang, was under mortar and artillery fire.

Associated Press Correspondent Don Huth, reporting on the situation at Pohang, the eastern anchor of the 120-mile battle perimeter, said Red patrolling was heavy last night three miles north of that port. He said Eighth Army had no confirmation of reports that the Reds have succeeded in throwing a ring of men two-thirds of the way around that city.

Kigye has changed hands three times since last weekend. Important in the area is a highway, two miles south of Kigye running between Pohang and the advanced American base of Taegu, 45 air miles to the southwest.

However, a spokesman for the Korean Advisory Group said later information today from the Pohang sector was that the Reds had reestablished the roadblock for about three miles along the highway.

The spokesman said the South Korean troops who yielded Kigye had fallen back south about one and a half miles. The Eighth Army

Similar to House Measure

Senate Votes Bill to Draft Doctors, Dentists, Specialists

With hardly any debate, the Senate yesterday approved by voice vote a bill permitting the drafting of doctors, dentists, and "allied specialists" for 21 months' service with the armed forces.

The swift Senate action came within a day after the Senate Armed Forces Committee had reported out the bill.

A similar measure was approved without dissent by the House Armed Services Committee yesterday, and Committee Chairman Carl Vinson (D., Ga.), said he would press for House action today.

Intent of both measures is to bring into the armed forces those doctors and dentists who were trained during World War II at Army and Navy expense, but who for one reason or another served little or no time in uniform. A spokesman for the Department of Defense estimated yesterday that the legislation would bring 4500 doctors and dentists into military service.

The two measures differ in some details. The House bill would withhold the $100 additional pay monthly given to doctors and dentists who volunteer for Medical Corps service; the Senate bill would give the $100 monthly bonus to the draftees as well as to the volunteer medical officers. The House measure sets an age limit of 45 on the doctors; the Senate bill the age of 55.

To encourage "volunteers," the House bill authorizes the medical draft eligibles to join the reserves and provides that all reserves called into active duty, with or without their consent, be paid the $100 a month bonus.

The medical draftees would be

Truman Bill With Milder Provisions Is Rejected

Communist, 'Front' Organizations Must Register, Label Mail, Identify Propaganda

By Murray Marder
Post Reporter

A drastic subversive controls bill which severely restricts activities of Communists or Communist "fronts" swept through the House yesterday by a 354-to-20 vote.

A brief, weak attempt to substitute for it a far milder bill approved by President Truman was batted down by a vote of 153 to 64.

The measure adopted is known as the Woods Bill. It was sent to the Senate where the Administration hopes it can obtain a bill far more to its liking, but where there also is increasing pressure for stringent controls.

Passed amid statements from some members that it doesn't go far enough, and scattered shouts that it envisions a "police state" and "thought control," the House bill would:

Require registration with the Attorney General of all Communists, and Communist "front" groups and their officers.

Collectively define Communists and "front" members as members of "Communist organizations" and,

1. Ban them from nonelective Government service or employment in any plant which has a Government contract for defense work;

2. Prevent them from obtaining pass ports;

3. Require them to label their mail, "Disseminated by ———, a Communist organization";

4. Require them to identify their radio or television broadcasts in a similar manner;

5. Ban them from Federal income tax exemptions for organizational purposes.

Restricts Contributions

The bill would also:

Make it illegal for any officer of the United States, Government employe or defense plant worker to contribute funds or services to a Communist organization.

Prevent any United States official or employe from giving any member of a Communist organization, without permission, any classified Government information.

The bill would establish a five-member Subversive Activities Control Board, appointed by the President, which will determine which organizations are "Communist action" groups and which are "Communist fronts." A broad directive is given to aid—and direct—the board's consideration in making such determinations.

Penalties for violating the proposed law could be assessed up to $10,000 or five years imprisonment, or both, for each offense.

During debate on the bill, proponents argued that it is far less drastic than the Mundt-Nixon bill, which the House passed in 1948 by a 319 to 58 vote. Some argued

Prices and Wages Linked

Conferees Agree to Controls On Selective Basis by Truman

House and Senate conferees agreed last night to give President Truman authority to impose price and wage controls on a "selective" basis, but stipulated both must be applied together on any item or industry.

The compromise was reached at 10:45 p. m. after an intermittent all day session in which two earlier compromise attempts had been rejected.

It cleared the last major hurdle to final approval of the economic controls bill today. Leaders from both Houses predicted the few remaining details could be worked out by noon today.

The final compromise combines features of selective price controls voted by the House and a compromise sponsored by Chairman Burnet R. Maybank (D., S. C.) of the Senate conferees.

The Senate group had rejected an almost identical offer when it was advanced by the House earlier yesterday.

Maybank said he thought it was the best compromise that could be arrived at under the circumstances.

As it now stands, the bill would let the President apply three types of controls:

1. Voluntary agreements among industry and labor groups; 2. selective controls with price and wage control stied together, and 3. all-out mandatory ceilings on prices and wages.

Under the selective authority, the President could impose price ceilings on any article, material or service. But he would have to apply wage ceilings on the same items at the same time.

When a "substantial part of all retail sales . . . materially affecting the cost of living" are under selective curbs, the President would be required to impose controls on wages and prices on a general basis.

The bill allows the President, however, to "make such adjust-

Senate Chiefs Fix Sept. 9 as Quitting Date

By Robert C. Albright

Senate Democratic leaders yesterday narrowed the remaining legislative business of this session to four major "musts" in a new drive to close shop at the Capitol.

Shelving the Alaska and Hawaii statehood bills and many less important measures, they announced in effect a September 9 cut-off date for Senate business.

Senate Democratic Leader Scott W. Lucas (Ill.) ordered day and night sessions commencing after Labor Day in an effort to clear this foreshortened program:

(1) The economic controls bill now locked in conference; (2) the emergency tax bill slowly moving through the Senate; (3) the $16,771,000,000 rearmament bill still in a Senate committee, and (4) anti-subversive legislation booked as the Senate final.

The drive to recess Congress at least temporarily by the close of next week promptly bumped into a flat House "No" and a whole series of Senate legislative obstacles.

House leaders went right ahead with plans to take a 10-day recess over Labor Day (from September 1 to 12). House chiefs said they had already agreed to the time out, so the House literally won't be here on the date set by the Senate for the wind-up. As a result both Houses must return the following week for a formal close, possibly around September 15.

Even if the House joined the drive, these Senate complications threatened further delays:

1. Stronger than expected support for an excess profits tax developed in Senate Democratic polls, raising the strong possibility that the Senate may write the levy into the Administration's interim tax bill. Senate Finance Committee leaders have served notice that would mean further hearings and a long-drawn-out conference fight.

2. The most controversial round of all was brewing around the McCarran anti-subversive bills scheduled to follow the tax bill before the Senate. To meet the

Truman Plans To Air Policies In Radio Talk

President Truman is going on the air soon to answer some of the questions Americans are asking about Korea and other worrisome matters abroad and at home.

Republicans have been demanding an explanation from Mr. Truman, and Democrats have been hoping for one.

The White House said that it was "felt desirable that the President should tell the country about the affairs of state." Nothing was said about whether the fireside chat would be a substitute for the whistle-stop talks that Mr. Truman was expected to make in connection with the 1950 election, but which were called off because of Korea.

Just the same the Democrats welcomed the news that the President was going to take the Administration's story to the people. Many of those up for reelection in November feel that the Republicans have gained the initiative by their assault on the Administration's foreign policy, particularly with respect to Asia.

A good many Democratic candidates have been waiting for the White House to give them the answers to the GOP offensive.

The word at the White House was that Mr. Truman would talk about the domestic situation, the world situation, and more particularly about Korea—"the why of it all."

Mr. Truman has started work on the speech, it was said, and hopes to deliver it at an early date. It was reported that he would deliver it before the end of next week, or at least before Congress recesses or adjourns.

William M. Boyle, jr., chairman of the Democratic National Committee, said last week at the White House that the Republicans would hurt themselves at the polls if they tried to make a "political football" of the Korean war. He added that the Democratic National Committee did not intend to let the Korean matter become a political issue.

MacArthur Briefed on U.S. Policy

By Ferdinand Kuhn
Post Reporter

President Truman sent Gen. Douglas MacArthur yesterday, "for your information," a copy of the document outlining official American policy toward Formosa and China.

The document was the President's letter of last Sunday to Ambassador Warren R. Austin, American representative at the United Nations. Read it, the President told MacArthur in effect, and you will see why I had to cancel your message on the subject to the Veterans of Foreign Wars.

The letter to Austin emphasized, as MacArthur's message did not, American friendship for the Chinese people, a willingness to have the U. N. consider the Formosa problem, and a desire to keep the island "neutralized" and out of war.

Also a Pat on Back

But the President also gave MacArthur a pat on the back for the job he was doing as United Nations commander in the Korean war. The clear implication was that the President admired MacArthur and would go on supporting him—as a soldier.

Here is what Mr. Truman wrote to MacArthur:

"I am sending you for your information the text of a letter which I sent to Ambassador Austin on August 27. I am sure that when you examine this letter, and the letter which Ambassador Austin addressed to Trygve Lie on August 25 (a copy of which I was told was sent to your headquarters that night,) you will understand why my action of the 26th in directing the withdrawal of your message to the Veterans of Foreign Wars was necessary.

White House For Vast Tank Building Plan

Expansion of the Army's tank program—including sizeable production of new heavy armor—has been approved by President Truman, Representative Carl Vinson (D., Ga.) said yesterday.

Vinson, chairman of the House Armed Services Committee, made the statement following a White House visit. He said Mr. Truman indorsed a report made by a subcommittee of his group, criticizing the adequacy of the Army tank program and had agreed to its major recommendation—proposing a 500-million-dollar expansion.

A supplemental budget estimate for the big new tank program will be submitted to Congress, Vinson said, but may not come before January.

The first supplemental defense spending bill already approved by the House contains a "sizeable sum" for tanks, the Georgian said. He added that he considers it insufficient.

The Army has built no tanks since the war though a program to convert numbers of the 46-ton medium General Pershings into General Pattons was just beginning to turn out finished "hardware" when the trouble arose in Korea. The Patton has the same chassis and gun as the Pershing, but a new, more powerful engine plus a "fluid drive" transmission making it more maneuverable.

U. N. Security Council Votes To Probe U. S. Formosa Action

Lake Success, N. Y., Aug. 29 (U.P.).—The United Nations Security Council voted tonight to examine United States action toward Formosa, an action described by the Communist world as an "invasion."

The Council voted down, however, a Soviet proposal that the Chinese Communists—first to indict the United States for its Formosan policy—be invited to attend the session.

The vote to debate American policy concerning the Far Eastern outpost of the Chinese Nationalists was 7-2, with the United States voting in favor. President Truman has said repeatedly that the U. N. should investigate and decide the future of Formosa.

Though Russia got its way in putting the Formosan question on the agenda it suffered defeat in the wording of the resolution. Russia's Jacob A. Malik had sought to brand the United States an aggressor from the start, and to take up the debate from there.

But the item was listed on the agenda as "a complaint of armed invasion of Taiwan (Formosa)" under a compromise wording suggested by India.

On the ballot to invite the Chinese Communists, the proposal failed to pass by a wide margin, although many delegates indicated they might be willing to have the Communists attend the debate when it is begun by the Council. They were opposed, however, to extending a blanket invitation to them at this time.

Malik gave to the world tonight a sign that he will not walk out of the Security Council again when his presidency ends August 31. He told the Council, as it adjourned until Thursday, that "the Soviet delegation reserves the right to raise this issue (that of inviting the Chinese Communists) when the Formosan issue is debated."

It would be impossible for the Council in its single remaining August session to dispose of item 1 on its agenda—Korea. Therefore, he will have to return to the Council in September to fulfill his declaration.

Anyone puzzled as to why the United States would seek to expose itself in this way had only to consult the records. The United States has said often it has nothing to hide in its policy toward Formosa.

President Truman, announcing June 27 that he was sending the U. S. Seventh Fleet to Formosa, declared:

"The determination of the future status of Formosa must await the restoration of security in the Pacific, a peace settlement with Japan, or consideration by the United Nations."

Ambassador Warren R. Austin, chief United States delegate to the Security Council, on August 25 answered Communist China's charge that United States policy toward Formosa constituted "criminal, armed invasion."

Austin countered with the statement that the United States "would welcome United Nations consideration" of the case.

"We would approve full United Nations investigation here or on the spot," Austin said. "We believe that United Nations consideration would contribute to a peaceful, rather than a forcible solution of that problem."

Graziani Freed After More Than 5 Years in Prison

Rome, Aug. 29 (U.P.).—War Criminal Rodolfo Graziani, Mussolini's "empire builder" and leader of Italy's armed forces in World War II, was released from prison today, a tired, broken, sick old man.

The one-time "Lion of Africa," who after the war called his commanders "cowards" and shouted hatred for the British, went immediately into seclusion.

Graziani, 68, was freed five years and four months after his arrest as a war criminal. He was sentenced to 19 years.

Hurricane Moving Over Gulf, Menaces Cities on Coast

New Orleans, Aug. 29 (AP).—The New Orleans Weather Bureau alerted the middle Southern coast line today for an impending strike by the hurricane now in the center of the Gulf of Mexico.

Chief Forecaster W. R. Stevens of the New Orleans bureau reported the poorly defined hurricane packing increased power with winds ranging up to 95 miles an hour "will likely strike in the middle Gulf area."

Stevens said he expected in later advisories to estimate the time when the hurricane will hit the coast line and to provide a closer approximation where it will move inland.

Aircraft reconnaissance located the storm this morning about 450 miles south of New Orleans and Mobile and about half way between them.

Floods following a tropical disturbance caused heavy damage to crops in Cuba, and an undetermined number of deaths.

$300,000 More to Go Monthly To Area Social Security Payees

Nearly $300,000 more a month will be paid the 18,000 social security beneficiaries in the District and nearby Maryland and Virginia under terms of the new law.

This is the first major result of the amendments to the old-age and survivors insurance law signed Monday by President Truman.

District and Alexandria field offices yesterday made public these figures:

District: Now has 11,312 persons drawing monthly retirement payments of $229,914. After September they will rise to $424,574.

Md. Rises $44,000

Maryland (Montgomery, Prince Georges, St. Marys, Charles and Calvert counties): Now has 3217 beneficiaries drawing $74,044 which will rise to $118,358 a month.

Virginia (Alexandria and Arlington, Fairfax, Culpeper, Loudoun, Fauquier, Prince William and Rappahanock counties): Now has 3472 beneficiaries drawing $67,423 a month which will go up to $124,227.

In the entire area now are 18,001 current beneficiaries receiving $371,381. The new total will be $667,159. The increase is due to the larger payments, ranging from 50 to 100 percent as of September 1 payable in October, under the revised law.

For example, a person, now receiving the average minimum of around $26 a month will get around $46. A widow with two children who has received about $55 a month will get about $110.

A second result will be an immediate addition of about 2600 persons to the beneficiaries because of the liberalization of requirements. Of these, about 1800 are in the District, 200 in the Maryland areas and another 600 in Virginia. Up to now they have been rejected because they did not have sufficient

Lewis, Murray Reject Green's 'No-Strike' Pledge Proposal

By Sam Stavisky
Post Reporter

A proposal by AFL President William Green for a "no-strike" pledge by labor if needed to halt "Communist aggression" yesterday came under fire by John L. Lewis, United Mine Workers chief, and CIO President Philip Murray.

In a sarcastically worded "memorandum" to his one-time UMW lieutenant, Lewis in effect denounced Green's proposal as selling the American workers down the river.

Murray, attending a meeting of the CIO executive committee here, told reporters that any talk of a "no-strike" pledge at this time is "premature." The CIO, he said, was not ready to make such a pledge right now when, he asserted, only about 6 percent of the Nation's productive capacity is being used for war purposes.

Green, in a quick rejoinder to the Lewis "memorandum," stuck by his guns. Lewis could do as he pleased, but the AFL, Green insisted, stands ready now to give the "no-strike" pledge "whenever the President of the United States advises us such action is necessary in order to protect our country against Communist aggression."

The AFL and CIO both gave "no-strike" pledges during World War II. The United Mine Workers, however, refrained from taking such a vow, and did make use of the strike during the war. A "no-strike" pledge at this time, union officials pointed out, would have a bad effect on the UMW strike against the Nation's major soda ash producers, and would hurt several CIO unions currently negotiating for contract improvements. Murray said that his own United Steelworkers of America

M'Arthur Analysis Called Exaggerated

Counter-Offensive

Tydings Hits 'Isolation' Line of GOP

Senator Tydings (D., Md.), who is out for another six-year term in November, yesterday opened a counter-offensive against the Republican Party in the field of foreign policy.

He said the GOP had largely followed the isolation line and opposed defense against Russia.

"If the country had followed the Republican position," he said, "we would be impotent today."

The Maryland lawmaker cited figures to show that the Republicans in the House had voted overwhelmingly against aid for Korea before the war broke out there. The Republicans, along with Representative Marcantonio of New York, he said, voted "for the course recommended by the Communist Daily Worker."

Tydings cited the voting record of "the Republican leader in the United States Senate"—Kenneth Wherry of Nebraska—to back up his contention that the GOP had followed the isolation line.

He said that Wherry had voted to cut arms aid for Greece and Turkey when they were threatened by Russia; voted against extension of Selective Service in 1948; voted to cut military aid to America's allies in '49; voted against the North Atlantic Pact; voted against authorizing foreign economic aid, including aid to China.

"Before World War II," said Tydings, "a majority of Republicans in the Senate voted against acquiring critical and scarce materials such as rubber, tin, etc., for stockpiling. They voted against building up our Coast Guard and seaplanes. They voted against Selective Service a few months before Pearl Harbor, and many other needed measures. This is a sorry record but it is one that the Republicans will have to explain. I intend to recount it from every platform in the State of Maryland."

Some military men here feel that General MacArthur's declaration on Formosa—given to the Veterans of Foreign Wars and then withdrawn on White House orders—overstated the strategic importance of the islands just a bit.

Without question, Formosa is important strategically, it is held. It would be valuable in our hands in case of a war against an Asiatic continental power and would be a thorn in our side if held by the enemy—just as it was during the last war.

The island undoubtedly looms large in MacArthur's consciousness, for it was the staging point for the invasion of the Philippines.

Everything—or just about everything—he said about Formosa in the VFW statement is true. But some qualified military men here feel he waxed a bit too eloquent about its advantages and failed to state that many of the things an enemy could do with it in war-time also could be done almost as well from bases on the Chinese mainland.

In his statement, MacArthur compared Formosa to "an unsinkable aircraft carrier and submarine tender ideally located to accomplish offensive strategy and at the same time checkmate defensive or counter-offensive operations by friendly forces based on Okinawa and the Philippines."

"This unsinkable carrier-tender has the capacity to operate from 10 to 20 air groups of types ranging from jet fighters to B-29 type bombers as well as to provide forward operating facilities for short-range coastal submarines," he went on. In acquiring this forward submarine base, the efficacy of the short range submarine would be so enormously increased by the additional radius of activity as to threaten completely sea traffic from the south and interdict all sea lanes in the Western Pacific. Submarine blockade by the enemy with all its destructive ramifications would thereby become a virtual certainty."

Formosa's air bases—there are a lot of them and more could be built—undoubtedly would play a big role in any Far Eastern War. Used as a base for Russian submarines, the effectiveness of the Red underseas fleet would be considerably greater than if it had to operate from the Vladivostock area.

But could not the same thing be done—as far as submarines and long-range strategic bombers are concerned—from the Chinese coast, only 100 miles from Formosa, some military men ask. And without some of the logistics problems involved in use of an island base?

One answer MacArthur might make to this is that there are now air bases and port facilities on Formosa—built by the Japs. To a considerable extent they would have to be constructed on the mainland. The question is a complicated one.

The point made by some officials here in their criticism of MacArthur's statement is that there are many elements—both military and political — entering into the strategic importants of Formosa which were not set forth in that declaration. Top Government officials here must consider all of them in reaching a decision in the matter.

Bullet Crashes Meeting

'Free' Elections Have No Contests, Reds' Definition

Berlin, Aug. 29 (AP).—The Russians defined free elections today as voting that is free from contests.

The description was contained in a lead editorial by the official Soviet army's Taegliche Rundschau to explain the October 15 "national front" balloting in the Soviet zone.

"These elections will be the most free Germany has ever had," the Rundschau commented. It added:

"Free from anti-Soviet agitation, free from demagoguery of opposition parties, from all bribery by monopolistic capital, from all pressure and terror of foreign taskmasters."

The election has been set up by the Communists in order to give their "provisional" government a permanent character. The ruling Socialist Unity (Communist) Party wrote the election code so that it would have 70 percent of the places on the ticket. The remainder was doled out in insignificant portions to the collaborating Christian Democrats, Liberal Democrats, National Democrats, trade union and youth blocs.

communique today had put the distance at 300 to 400 yards.

The spokesman said the South Koreans defending Pohang withdrew "slightly" Tuesday under Communist pressure.

Another slight reverse was suffered by the United Nations at the other end of the battlefront—the southern sector guarding the main supply port of Pusan. There early today, Korean Reds stormed and occupied the crest of Battle Mountain, an observation peak about 35 air miles west of Pusan. But at dawn Wednesday, the United States Twenty-fourth Regiment, a battle-seasoned Negro outfit, began a counterattack.

Battle Mountain is one of several important heights barring the way to level ground from Masan east to Pusan. Masan is 27 air miles from the port.

Battle Mountain has changed hands seven times in two weeks. Last night the defenders were cut off for four hours and supplied by air as they beat off a Communist bayonet attack.

Meanwhile on the northern front, the Reds were building up their forces—possibly as many as 60,000 men—for a drive on Taegu, 16 miles southwest, and then drive south toward Pusan.

Allied forces are larger and have more battle knowledge, and the Communists would have to collide with fortified positions, instead of trying to slip around them.

If the Reds had any hope of fulfilling their latest target date of September 1 for the capture of Pusan, it was gone now.

British and Australian planes in action since early in the war were out again, hammering at vital targets in enemy territory.

United States Fifth Air Force fighters and light bombers flew 126 missions, hitting railroads, vehicles, pontoon bridges, gun emplacements, troop convoys and other targets.

B-29 Superforts slugged at Red supply sources and at rail and highway lines to the front.

Adm Struble Warns Against Optimism

Tokyo, Aug. 29 (U.P.).—The commander of the United States Seventh Fleet said today there is no "sound reason" to expect the Korean war to be ended by Christmas. He warned that it would be a mistake to let "optimism or wishful thinking" weaken the war effort.

"I'd like to see our men 'out of the trenches by Christmas,' but I cannot see any sound reason for such a conclusion," Vice Admiral Arthur D. Struble said in an interview.

He conceded the situation now looks more favorable than it did in the first weeks of the war, but added, "we definitely are not in a position to accept any letdown based on optimism or wishful thinking."

Struble emphasized that the Korean Communists have proved to be an enemy of "great initiative and stubbornness," despite limitations of equipment and supply.

The Seventh Fleet has the dual mission of supporting the ground war in Korea and preventing a Communist invasion of Formosa, last stronghold of the Chinese Nationalists.

The Reds have launched local attacks on the shoreline opposite Formosa and have boasted that they will seize the island despite the Seventh Fleet. So far, however, "no efforts have been made to conduct an actual invasion," Struble said.

Bill to Aid GI Families Nears Action

By the United Press

House-Senate conferees agreed yesterday on a compromise bill providing allotments of from $85 to $165 monthly to GI families, including the serviceman's contribution.

Senator Chan Gurney (R., S. Dak.) predicted the measure would be finally approved by the House and Senate by the end of the week and rushed to the President for his signature.

It was estimated that payments, retroactive to August 1, would cost the Government 300 million dollars during the fiscal year ending next July 1.

As in World War II, officers would not be eligible.

GI families received allotments geared to the serviceman's rating, with privates receiving the smallest payment. Families of first and master sergeants would get from $147.50 to $165 a month.

A private would contribute $40 a month out of his pay, leaving him from $40 to $55 for himself. The Government would add $45 for one dependent, $67.50 for two and $85 for more than two.

A master sergeant would contribute $80 a month. That would leave him $118 a month for himself. The Government would chip in the same amount for his family as in the case of a private.

The bill was rushed through Congress in response to mounting demands for Federal help for families of reservists and National Guardsmen called to duty in the Korean war emergency.

It goes back to the House first, then to the Senate.

The new allowances are more than 50 percent higher than those of World War II to compensate for increases in living costs. But, unlike World War II, when some men with big families drew more pay than high-ranking officers, they establish a ceiling on the Government's contribution.

Executive Starts Ocean Round Trip In Small Plane

Grand Rapids, Mich., Aug. 29 (AP).—A Minneapolis business executive, Switzerland-bound in a small plane, took off tonight for Akron, O., on the next leg of his flight.

The veteran flier, Max Conrad, 47, is en route for Teterboro, N. J., to visit his wife and nine children living at Vevey, on Lake Constance. He flew here yesterday from Winona, Minn., in his Piper Pacer.

Engineering adjustments were made on the plane here. It will be several days before he starts his overseas flight via Goose Bay, Labrador, to Greenland, Iceland and Scotland, but if favorable conditions prevail he expects to arrive in Switzerland next week. He expects to return on the same route.

Payments in Family Bill

Following are the monthly payments that would be made to GI families under the allowance bill approved yesterday by a Senate-House conference committee.

liable for 21 months' service and would be given officer rank commensurate with their age and experience.

Under the Senate bill, "allied specialists" would include:

Veterinarians, bacteriologists, bio-chemists, radiation chemists, organic chemists, parasitologists, pathologists, pharmacologists, biophysicists, radiation physicists, optometrists, pharmacists, occupational therapists, chiropodists, osteopaths, physiologists, radiobiologists, serologists, virologists, sanitary engineers, industrial hygienists, medical statisticians, industrial engineers, dietitians, psychologists, entomologists, psychiatric social workers, nutritionists, and laboratory officers.

Locally, Dr. William M. Ballinger, president of the District Medical Society, appealed by letter to 50 young doctors in this area, trained by the Army during the war, to volunteer for active military duty at once. The letter pointed out that "the Army is in urgent need of medical officers and it is the unanimous opinion of various officials and nonofficial bodies who have studied this matter that you are in the category which should be called upon first to serve."

Meanwhile, at Arlington Farms, five Selective Service draftees, from the Hyattsville and Chevy Chase board area, were inducted into the Army.

Roads Funds Bill Sent to Truman After Conference

Congress sent to President Truman yesterday a Federal highway aid bill calling for an outlay of $1,188,000,000 for roads in the two years beginning July 1, 1951.

Action was completed late yesterday when the Senate approved by voice vote a compromise, worked out by a Senate-House committee, of differing bills the two chambers had passed. The House had accepted the compromise earlier.

The measure does not put up any money but authorizes 450 million dollars for the primary highway system, 300 million dollars for the secondary highway system, 250 million dollars for the urban system and smaller amounts for roads and trails in parks and Indian reservations.

Life Imprisonment Plus 34 Years His Sentence

Vandalia, Ill., Aug. 28 (AP).—A man who boasted it would take him 245 years to serve out time for crimes he has committed had his future taken care of here today.

Claude Tillman, 48, pleaded guilty before Circuit Judge F. R. Dove to several charges growing out of an attack last June on Carl Pursinger, 38, Kansas City oil truck driver. Tillman got life imprisonment for armed robbery and grand larceny; 20 years for theft of a truck; 14 years for assault with intent to kill.

hensive report of their conversations with you and of their visit to the United Nations forces now fighting under your command in Korea. Their reports were most satisfactory and highly gratifying to me."

Incident Not Closed

Gen. J. Lawton Collins, Army Chief of Staff, and Admiral Forrest P. Sherman, Chief of Naval Operations, returned last week from a visit to the Far East.

The President's message to MacArthur was issued 24 hours after White House Press Secretary Charles G. Ross had said the incident of the MacArthur statement was "closed."

But the affair was emphatically not "closed" for some Republican leaders on Capitol Hill. Senator Owen Brewster of Maine, chairman of the Senate Republican Policy Committee, attacked what he called the President's "muzzling" of MacArthur, and promised that Republican candidates would "take it to the people" in the election campaign this fall. He said it was a prime example of "confusion" in the Administration.

Rayburn Caustic

House Speaker Rayburn told reporters, however, that MacArthur should stick to soldiering and not "try to run the foreign policy of the United States."

"I think General MacArthur has a great job to do if he stays in his own field," Rayburn said.

Meanwhile Navy Secretary Francis P. Matthews, another target of a weekend reprimand from the White House, testified with Admiral Sherman at a closed session of a Senate Appropriations subcommittee. Senator Homer Ferguson (R., Mich.), a member of the subcommittee, said later there had been no discussion of Matthews' speech at Boston in which he approved starting a preventive war against Russia.

According to Ferguson, the Navy Secretary admitted he was not familiar with all American commitments abroad although he was informed on some of them.

"There isn't any coordination with the military on foreign policy," Ferguson said after hearing Matthews' testimony. "The State Department isn't keeping the military abreast of developments."

Ferguson said this "faulty liaison" was especially apparent about Formosa.

Other Republicans felt the President's order to MacArthur would boomerang against the Administration in the congressional elections.

But Democrats thought the public would understand and approve what the President had done in reasserting his authority over foreign policy and civilian control of generals in this field. They noted that important Republican and independent newspapers had approved the President's action, and had censured MacArthur for not clearing his message in advance with his Administration superiors.

MacArthur's own reaction probably would help to determine whether the message would become an important campaign issue.

Soviet Expected To Exploit

There was little doubt that Soviet propaganda would exploit the Matthews and MacArthur statements as proving a favorite Moscow "line"—namely, that President Truman is only a puppet in the hands of military and financial "warmongers."

But the stern repudiation of Matthews' speech from the White House and the State Department, and the unprecedented rebuke to MacArthur, would help to offset such propaganda.

The important thing now, many officials felt yesterday, was to make sure, by rigid official clearances and otherwise, that such incidents would not be allowed to happen again.

Defense Secretary Louis Johnson, the civilian superior of both offenders, had a 30-minute talk with President Truman yesterday, accompanied by Army Secretary Frank Pace. When Johnson emerged, he told reporters only that the meeting had been on "largely routine" matters.

Canadian Bill Seeks End of Rail Walkout

Until January

Truman Puts Quietus On UMT Bill

President Truman yesterday put the quietus on a Senate move to enact universal military training at this session of Congress.

Following a conference with Chairmen Millard Tydings (D., Md.) and Carl Vinson (D., Ga.) of the Senate and House Armed Services Committees, he wrote them suggesting action on UMT could well wait until January.

The President reaffirmed his support of the program, saying he is "just as strongly in favor of it today" as he has been in the past, but pointed out that due to the Korean fighting "it could not possibly be put into effect at once . . . or in the immediately foreseeable future."

He had said substantially the same thing before at press conferences without slowing down the Senate committee's drive to pass the bill, but his formal statement was expected to do so. The group meets this morning to consider the matter.

Two Measures Before Them

They have two measures before them — the Department of Defense's detailed bill spelling out the vast program and a committee version merely authorizing it and leaving details to be worked out by a UMT commission which would report back to Congress next year. Many Senators feel the former is "too complicated" to push through this late in the session.

There is some support for the simplified bill but others feel it would accomplish little. Moreover, the House Armed Services Committee has been reluctant to act at all this year.

Vinson told reporters Mr. Truman's letter closes the books on UMT as far as this session of Congress is concerned.

In his letter, Mr. Truman urged that the Senate committee continue work on the measure so that it may be ready for final action in January.

Lodge Wants Bill Now

Meanwhile, Senator Henry Cabot Lodge (R., Mass.), declared the pending UMT bill does not go far enough and urged that every able-bodied young man should be required to spend 18 months in military service. Congress should not go home without ordering it, he told the Senate.

Universal training—six months in military camp plus a period of years in the National Guard or Reserves under the present plan—has little value under present circumstances, Lodge said.

"Although we have had our Pearl Harbor (in Korea) we are not yet awake," said the Senator. "The just and realistic course would be to require universal service under which every able-bodied young man serves for 18 months. There would then be units which are actually on a war footing."

In his letters to Tydings and Vinson President Truman declared he is "very much in favor" of UMT and recalled his past efforts to make it law.

Cites Difficulties

"However, the realities of the situation are that if such legislation were enacted tomorrow it could not possibly be put into effect at once," he said. "A universal training program would require many training camps and other installations and scores of thousands of experienced military personnel for training purposes.

"In view of the demands made on our military forces by the Korean aggression, it is clear that we could not possibly make available the installations and trained military manpower to put a universal training program into operation at this time or in the immediate foreseeable future. Accordingly, it does not seem to me immediately necessary for the Congress to enact universal training legislation.

"Legislation of this character, however, should be placed on the statute books at an early date so we can put it into operation as soon as circumstances permit. Accordingly, I hope your Committee will continue its active consideration of this legislation with a view to seekng final action on it in January."

Ottawa, Aug. 29 (AP).—A government bill directing resumption of Canadian Railway operations—halted a week ago by a nationwide strike—was laid before the House of Commons and swiftly given its first readng today.

Subsequently a union spokesman predicted the strikers would go back to work tomorrow whether or not Parliament had completed action on the legislation by that time.

Prime Minister Louis St. Laurent said the government required operations to start "at the earliest possible moment."

Only the title is covered in the first reading, the initial stage of passage for a measure, and St. Laurent did not immediately explain the contents of the bill.

It is reported, however, to order the railway companies and the unions to get the trains running again on temporary wage-hour scales based on the railways' best offer, to be followed by negotiations.

St. Laurent said the bill could not be distributed, except to opposition leaders, before 6:45 p. m. (EST). It was to be dealth with at a night sitting of the House of Commons.

With rail service paralyzed by a walkout of 124,000 non-operating employes, many of the legislators were flown to Ottawa for the special session of Parliament.

The unions demanded that the work week be reduced from 48 to 40 hours a week, effective January 1, with pay for 48 hours, plus a general wage boost of 7 cents an hour, retroactive to June, 1949. The railways offered a 4-cent increase, effective September 1, and a 40-hour week with 48 hours' pay, to be effective October 1, 1951.

U. S. Rail Executives Would Resume Talks

Railroad management spokesmen notified Presidential assistant John R. Steelman yesterday they are ready to resume contract negotiations "at any time" with the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen and the Order of Railway Conductors.

The two big unions called off a Nationwide strike, scheduled to begin last Monday, after President Truman seized the carriers. Trains are now running under nominal Army control.

The three-man management negotiating committee met with Steelman at the White House for an hour.

White House officials said the meeting was arranged at the carriers' request, and that the management spokesmen expressed willingness to renew face-to-face bargaining in the 17-month-old dispute over the unions' demands for higher pay and a shorter work week.

Steelman was expected to convey the statement to union leaders who had previously said they would be willing to renew talks at any time.

Pickets Boo as Senator Taft Waves

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

STEELWORKERS—Senator Robert A. Taft waves at booing pickets as his car leaves the Youngstown Sheet and Tube Co. plant. Virtually all operations in finishing departments were suspended as CIO United Steelworkers protested Taft's visit to the plant yesterday. Police lined the gates as the Taft car passed through. CIO leaders declared they wanted no "captive audiences" for Taft although no arrangements were made for the Senator to speak in the plant

Workers Quit, Protest Taft Visit to Plant

Youngstown, O., Aug. 29 (AP).—Senator Robert A. Taft (R., Ohio), searching for labor votes in heavily Democratic Youngstown, was heckled today by about 100 CIO United Steelworkers as his car swung through a steel plant gate.

The Republican Senate policy leader was here as part of his strenuous campaign for reelection this fall.

The unionists, when they heard Taft was going to visit the plant they work in—the big Campbell works of Youngstown Sheet & Tube Co., left their jobs two hours before he arrived.

Taft did not plan to make a speech at the plant.

Some 3400 other workers remained inside, but departure of the protesting employes from the boiler house and blooming mill idled about 1500. Steel finishing operations were halted.

A police guard was on duty when his automobile entered and left the plant, but there was no disturbance. There were some boos and catcalls.

Taft appeared unruffled by the pickets.

"Even most of the pickets smiled at me when I waved and seemed glad to meet a notorious person," Taft commented.

James P. Griffin, District 26 director of the USW, issued a statement on the incident. He said: "I would not order any of my men to serve as a captive audience, and I applaud their spunk in resisting the company's effort toward that end."

Alexandria's Guard Unit Off to Camp

Battery B of the 710th Anti-Aircraft Artillery Battalion, activated August 14, entrained for Camp Stewart, Ga., for "further training."

The Guardsmen were given a sendoff at their Alexandria Armory headquarters by Mayor Franklin P. Backus and several hundred families.

Then, with hundreds of more well-wishers lining the streets, they marched up King st. to the station. Originally they had planned to march in full kit. But because of hot weather their gear was taken to the station in trucks.

Another Washington area reserve outfit was due to leave this morning.

The Marine Radar Squardon, called to extended duty on August 21, was set to depart at 4 a. m. by plane for the West Coast from its home base at the Naval Air Station, Anacostia.

The squardon is commanded by Maj. Henry W. Branson, of 826 Tewkesbury pl. nw., a trust officer with the National Savings and Trust Co. It is part of the Organized Marine Air Reserves.

On the enlistment front yesterday:

Marines: 10 appplied, two accepted; four recruits sworn in. This brought enlistments for this month to 32, compared with 31 for July.

Army-Air Force: 12 Army sworn in, seven Air Force, including one Waf; seven qualified to be enlisted today. 12 failed.

Newspaper Convicted in Monopoly Suit

Cleveland, Ohio, Aug. 29 (U.P.).—The Lorain Journal, first newspaper against which the Government filed an antitrust suit, today was found guilty by Federal Judge Emerich B. Freed.

Judge Freed ruled that the Lorain Journal and its publishers Samuel A. and Isadore Horvitz, were "guilty of attempting to establish a monopoly by bold, relentless, predatory commercial behavior."

The Government last spring brought the unprecedented suit against the Journal charging that the newspaper had violated the Sherman Anti-Trust Act by conspiring to prevent advertisers from using facilties of the opposing Lorain Sunday News or radio station WEOL of nearby Elyria, Ohio.

In a memorandum to be followed by his decree, the judge found the Horvitz brothers and D. P. Self, business manager, guilty of violating section 2 of the Sherman Act, but not guilty of violating section 1, conspiring in restraint of trade.

Judge Freed held that freedom of the press was not involved in the practices of the Journal in attempting to blackball advertisers who used the competing mediums.

"The court cannot conceive," he said, "that the First Amendment to the Constitution (Freedom of the Press) renders it impotent to enjoin the defendants' practices.

"This is a vice condemned by the Anti-Trust Act, and the evil may be restrained without touching upon the legitimate business of the defendants."

Judge Freed said that the Government is entitled to relief, that is, "entitled to stop the practices used to establish an advertising monopoly in Lorain.

Senate Subpenas 97 Chicagoans In Crime Inquiry

Chicago, Aug. 29 (U.P.).—The Senate crime investigating committee has issued 97 subpenas for the appearance of Chicago's most notorious hoodlums and gamblers, it was disclosed today.

The subpenas included 67 for individuals—including Ralph Capone and many other of the Capone hey-day and later "syndicate" operations—and 30 businesses and corporations.

Those named were asked to submit all books, records, contracts, agreements, receipts and any other documentary evidence of their activities.

counsel for the committee, said George S. Robinson, associate he had been here five days organizing the drive with the help of agents of the Chicago crime commission.

Ceylon Joins World Bank

Ceylon yesterday became the forty-ninth member country in the World Bank and World monetary fund.

Ceylon's subscription to the capital stock of the bank was 150 shares with a 15-million-dollar par value. Its fund quota was 15 million dollars also.

2 Congressmen Returning From Korean Service

Manila, Aug. 29 (AP).—Two Congressmen arrived here today en route to Washington after seeing active service in the Korean war.

They are Representatives Hugh D. Scott, jr. (R., Pa.) and Henry J. Latham (R., N. Y.), who served a month as naval reserve officers with the United States fleet in Korean waters.

Latham flew in a combat strike from a carrier. Both visited front lines. Latham is a lieutenant-commander and Scott, a commander. Accompanying them back to the American capital is Comdr. William Lederer of the Navy Public Information Office in Washington.

After arriving, the Congressmen were guests of Rear Admiral Francis P. Old, commander of United States naval forces in the Philippines. They paid a social call on President Elpidio Quirino.

CIO Purges Longshoremen And 2 Other Left-Wing Unions

Harry Bridges' Longshoremen and two smaller West Coast unions were thrown out of the CIO yesterday, finally completing a purge of left-wing affiliates.

Expelled along with Bridges' International Longshoremen and Warehousemen's Union were the Marine Cooks and Stewards and the Fishermen and Allied Workers which recently merged with the Longshoremen.

They brought to 11 the number of CIO unions tossed out for hewing too close to the Communist Party line. Charges against a twelfth—the Furniture Workers—were withdrawn when it bounced its left-wing leaders.

Vote to Expel 41 to 2.

The CIO executive board, acting under special purge authority granted at the union's Cleveland convention, voted 41 to 2 to expel Bridges. All three unions automatically lost their executive board seats.

The no votes were cast by Hugh Bryson, president of the Marine Cooks, and J. A. Robertson, a vice president of the Longshoremen. The same vote was cast against the Cooks. Bryson voted alone against the 41 remaining board members when his union was ousted.

It was another heavy blow at the crumpling power of Bridges, stormy Australian-born labor leader who is free on bond at San Francisco pending appeal from a perjury conviction. He is accused of swearing falsely he was not a Communist when he applied for United States Citizenship. Robertson, a codefendant, also was convicted.

Bridges Repudiated

Bridges' own San Francisco local of the ILWU has repudiated his political leadership. It was understood CIO leaders now will use a core of "loyal" locals to try to reform the Longshoremen and the other unions.

That is the technique used in some of the other eight unions previously expelled, including the left-wing United Electrical Workers Union. Other expelled were the:

Farm Equipment Workers, United Public Workers, United Office and Professional Workers, Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers, Food, Tobacco and Agricultural Workers, American Communications Association and the Fur and Leather Workers.

The CIO has launched rival organizing drives in fields covered by most of the ousted unions, which are continuing as independents. The UE has merged with the Farm Equipment Workers.

Labor Big 3 Disagree

will be seeking a hike in pay this fall.

The acidly worded Lewis memorandum and the somber comment by Murray boded ill for Murray's recent moves to achieve labor unity among the Nation's major unions.

Lewis' memo to Green charged that Green had "stipulated" the exclusion of John L. in the amity talks going on betwen the AFL and CIO. Green retorted that few leaders in the labor movement believed in Lewis' professed "espousal" of labor amity after pulling out of the AFL in 1947. Lewis also withdrew from the AFL in the thirties to form the CIO, and then marched out of the CIO back into the AFL.

Unity Talks Postponed

On the subject of labor unity, Murray said the talks have been postponed until early October. Meanwhile, he said, the CIO unity committee was urging the AFL to bring both the United Mine Workers and the International Association of Machinists into the unity discussion.

The Lewis memorandum also charged that Green had "stipulated" the elimination of the UMW from the "select, star-chamber committee" of the National Security Resources Board. He warned that the UMW would not be bound by any commitments of that committee.

Lewis' reference was to a three-man labor committee participating in the advisory board to the NSRB. The UMW was represented by Secretary-Treasurer John Owens in the initial talks between W. Stuart Symington, NSRB chairman, and the Nation's labor leaders. But when the three-man "select" committee was chosen, Al Hayes of the Machinists was picked to serve along with Green and Murray.

One Club Bans Lattimore Talk, One Invites Him

Middlebury, Vt., Aug. 29 (U.P.).—Far Eastern expert Owen Lattimore was banned from speaking at one function today but invited to address another.

The Kiwanis Club at Gloversville, N. Y. canceled without explanation a scheduled talk by Lattimore. But Walter Jacobs, an official of the Lake Tarleton Club at Pike, N. H., invited Lattimore to address the club's guests. He said a poll showed 91 percent of the 390 guests wanted to hear Lattimore.

On Sunday Lattimore was barred from speaking at a fashionable New Hampshire hotel by a vote of guests.

B29s Bomb 60 Miles From Soviet Border

Tokyo, Aug. 29 (U.P.).—American, Australian and British planes of every type from B-29's to F-51 fighters rained death and destruction on the Communists today from North Korea near the Soviet border to the south coast.

They engaged in close support of ground forces, attacked railroad and highway communications and bombed ships off the coasts.

The B-29's made a 230-ton bomb attack on the railroad center of Chongjin, less than 60 miles from the Soviet border, through which the North Koreans get their war supplies from Russia.

Gen. Douglas MacArthur said "excellent" results were obtained in the attack, in which freight assembly yards, terminals and repair shops were hit.

The planes struck heavily at concentrations of railroad cars bottled up at Chongjin because of damage south.

The B-26 light bombers covered the entire west coast area from the Kyomipo steel center, just south of the enemy capital of Pongyang, to the port of Sunchon on the south coast. They struck especially at supply and reinforcement routes and centers.

Fighter planes cut a "wide arc" just back of the battle lines in close support of the infantry, and hit communications targets over a big area extending north of the thirty-eighth parallel frontier.

The fighters put special emphasis on close support of the troops defending Pohang and Kigye on the east coast.

B-29's, B-26's, F-80 jets, F-51's including those of the Royal Australian Air Force and carrier based planes of the American and British Navies and the United States Marines, were all in action against communications targets including railroad bridges and tracks.

British planes Monday destroyed two enemy coastal vessels of 100 tons each off Anhung, southwest of the enemy-occupied capital of Seoul.

Red Submarine Officers Reported Sailing Seven Seas

London, Aug. 29 (AP).—The Daily Herald in a story from Stockholm today said Russian submarine officers are sailing secretly in Soviet merchant ships to all parts of the world.

"They are under orders to achieve pinpoint navigational skill and learn snapshot recognition of foreign vessels in the shortest possible time," the dispatch said.

It added that the total of Russian submarines has reached 380, and prefabrication plants could produce 45 to 50 new boats each month if crews to run them were available.

The dispatch said 120 of the 380 are obsolete and that half of the remainder were built for purely defensive operation around the Russian coastline.

"So Russia's longrange operational underwater strength at this moment is 130 submarines," the dispatch said. "Fifty are believed to be in the Baltic and 60 in the Pacific."

The dispatch did not locate the other 20.

British Ban Red Paper

Hamburg, Germany, Aug. 29 (AP).—British authorities said today the "Nordeutsches Echo," the last Communist newspaper in the British zone, had been banned for 90 days.

Senate Unit Asks U. S. Judge Probe After Bridges' Release

The Senate Judiciary Committee yesterday proposed an investigation of the "competence, fitness and legal qualifications" of all Federal judges.

A resolution drafted by the committee for Senate consideration proposes the inquiry be made by the judiciary group or a subcommittee. The findings would be reported not later than March 15, 1951.

The resolution was an amended version of a resolution introduced last week by Senator Langer (R., N. Dak.).

Langer acted after the Ninth Federal Circuit Court of Appeals in San Francisco ordered Harry Bridges, leader of the Longshoremen's Union, released from jail. The order set aside a District Court decision revoking Bridges' $25,000 bond pending an appeal on a perjury conviction. The lower court had revoked the bail on grounds that Bridges was a threat to national security.

Langer called for a House-Senate investigation to determine whether any Federal judges are Communists or Communist sympathizers, members of subversive organizations, and whether they are "still fit" because of age or otherwise to perform their duties.

India Saving 10,000 Marooned by 'Quake

Calcutta, India, Aug. 29 (U.P.).—The government today began to evacuate an estimated 10,000 persons marooned by floodwaters let loose by the great earthquake of August 15 which still is rocking the northern region of Assam Province on the Tibet frontier.

More than 150 persons have been drowned in the last 10 days in the Subansiri Valley since that river overflowed, government spokesmen said. The flood waters have inundated 150 villages over hundreds of square miles.

Villagers, starving and waiting for rescue, have taken refuge in tree tops and on the roofs of huts, eyewitnesses reported. Corpses and carcasses of wild animals and domestic stock float among uprooted trees and wreckage of homes.

During the past few days the government has mobilized a mammoth fleet of shallow draft boats for rescue operations. The air force, army, police and Congress Party are cooperating and the government hopes it will take no more than two days.

Shocks set off by the giant mid-August quake still jolted Assam, terrorizing the isolated villagers, and the government warned the earth upheaval may continue for years.

Officials recalled there were more than 5000 tremors over 10 years after the 1897 Assam earthquake, which was the worst in modern history. The August 15 quake was almost as bad.

There still was no confirmation of reports that volcanos dormant for thousand of years have erupted again in the vast, unexplored region which was the epicenter of the quake.

People in the Mishmi hills reported they could see a fiery glow at night, but the tribal affairs adviser to the governor of Assam sent word he had had no such report.

Stormy Cretan Love Drama

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

ABDUCTED — Outbreaks were feared on the island of Crete following the reported abduction of 19-year-old Stassoula Petracogeorgi (above), said to have been taken to a mountain hideout by her sweetheart, Constantine Kephaloyannis. A blood feud has threatened between the politically powerful families of the principals. The families have been hostile for generations

2000 Mass To Free Crete's Girl Captive

Heraklion, Crete, Aug. 29 (U.P.).—A wartime Greek resistance hero today mobilized the band of 2000 fighters he led against the Nazis to free beautiful Tassoula Petrakogeorgi from her romantic captivity.

Monolis Badouva, a friend of the father of this modern "Helen of Troy," rounded up his wartime band and issued an ultimatum calling on her abductor to give her up within 48 hours.

Badouva's intervention, after two battalions of troops had failed to find her, heightened the government's fears that an armed conflict will break out between partisans of the two families on Crete, once known as the land of Troy.

Costas Kefaloughianos, 35, son of wealthy royalists, kidnaped the 19-year-old maiden here 10 days ago after Petrakogorgi, prominent liberal member of parliament, said he would never permit their marriage.

According to Kefaloughianos' family, the two were very much in love and were married last Saturday on legendary Mt. Ida, where the suitor had hidden her in a cave.

Petrakogeorgi conferred in Athens today with Liberal Premier Sophocles Venizelos, but neither man would issue a statement. The kidnaping has reached the point of a "cause celebre" here when the Athens public prosecutor forbade the capital's press to publish any news of it. Crete papers also have been muzzled.

The search for the couple continued today. Army trucks covered all roads on the island. Buses and automobiles were stopped and searched. Kefaloughianos' family hinted yesterday the couple was in the vicinity of Rethimno on the coast.

The Gallup Poll

6 of 10 U. S. Citizens Report Health Is Good, Survey Finds

By George Gallup
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., Aug. 29.—If you are an average American male you stand five feet nine inches tall, you weight about 165 pounds and aren't worried about your weight. You wear glasses, help with the dishes but hate to cook, and consider yourself more courageous than your wife but not as thrifty.

If you are a typical American woman you are five feet four, you tip the scales at about 135 while fervently wishing you could take a couple of inches off the hips.

Those are a few of the scores of facts which the Gallup Poll has amassed in its own census of the American people.

Only one-third of American adults have had their tonsils out. The proportion is a little higher among young adults under 30, but even in that group only 40 percent have ever had a tonsillectomy.

One adult in every five has had his appendix out.

One-third of us complain that our feet hurt, most from corns, fallen arches or bunions. One woman in three and one man in five suffer from backaches.

Victims of hay fever amount to 10 percent of the adult population, or something like 9,500,000 people, while twice as many say they have rheumatism. One in seven Americans has neuritis, one in 20 complains of asthma.

One-fifth say they have trouble with their hearing.

The biggest diet deficiency of the American people is that they don't eat enough citrus fruits and enough raw greens (what some rebellious husbands call "grass"). We're supposed to eat some every day, health experts rule, but only a little more than half of us live up to the rule.

About two-thirds of the population have a cold or grippe in winter, and even in July one person in every 20 has a cold.

Despite all these ills and ailments, we're not a nation of hypochondriacs. Most people—more than six in every 10—say their health is good, and about six out of ten say they would like to live to be 100.

But whereas doctors advise an annual physical examination to keep in good health, about 28,000,000 Americans have not been to a doctor within two years; and approximately 30,000,000 have avoided the dentist for four years or more.

The typical family's medical and dental bills come to about $100 a year at present.

Social Security Boost Due

"work credit"—that is, hadn't been covered long enough through payroll deductions and matching employer contributions.

Additional thousands will be added to the retirement plan when the new coverage goes into effect January 1.

Included will be an estimated 36,700 in the District, about 24,000 in Virginia and an unestimated number in Maryland.

Payments for domestics will be made quarterly, beginning on April 30, 1951, on what the Bureau of Internal Revenue yesterday promised will be a "special simple form." It will be filed by the house-holders.

Probably the only information required on the form will be the servant's name, social security account number (the servant will have to apply for this), the wages paid and tax due.

Employers may either take 1½ percent out of the servant's wages and match the amount himself, or he may pay the entire amount. On a $20-a-week salary, for example, the tax would total 60 cents, half of which could be deducted from the pay.

To Include Salesmen

The additional coverage next January will include full-time insurance salesmen, agent-drivers or commission drivers who deliver meat or bakery products, vegetables or fruit, beverages other than milk or laundry and dry cleaning. Full time traveling or city salesmen—but not door-to-door salesmen—will be covered.

One big group in Washington about whom the situation is not yet clear includes employes of nonprofit charitable, religious and educational institutions.

Hiker Is Rescued In Grand Canyon By Helicopter

Grand Canyon, Ariz., Aug. 28 (AP).—Eugene J. Hallday, 37, of Elyria, Ohio, was rescued today from the Grand Canyon by helicopter.

He had been missing since Saturday when he started hiking down a trail unused for 30 years.

Hallday negotiated the ancient Hance trail and reached the river Saturday night. Sunday he became ill and spent the day under a rock ledge out of the heat.

Today he started working his way back and was picked up by the helicopter.

Popsicle Peddler With Kind Heart Finds Court Stern

A popsicle butcher's tale about how his kind heart caused him to give away his merchandise to the kiddies availed him nothing yesterday in Municipal Court.

The vendor, George B. Morris, 25, of 211 4th st. se., was charged with embezzling $34.50 from his employer, the Goody-Goody Ice Cream Co., for whom he worked on an ice cream truck.

"Every time a little fellow came up and asked me for ice cream, I'd give it to him," Morris said.

Judge George D. Neilson sentenced him to serve 45 days or pay a $100 fine on the $34.50 embezzlement, and a like term for passing a $25 bad check.

Strict Anti-Red Bill Approved by House

it goes beyond that bill in certain respects.

President Truman had asked only for legislation to extend the statute of limitations to 10 years for espionage and securiy violations, require registration of trained saboteurs and spies, give him more power to provide security at military installations, and other similar powers.

Representative Cellers (D., N.Y.) spoke for the Administration bill(but no Administration leader took the floor for it, and debate on it was limited to five minutes by unanimous consent. It was rejected by teller vote.

On the roll-call vote passing the Wood bill, the only opponents were two Republicans, Burdick (R., N.D.) and Javits (R., N.Y.), and American Laborite Marcantonio (N.Y.), and 17 Democrats:

Aspinall (Colo.), Biemiller (Wis.), Blatnik (Minn.), Bosone (Utah), Carroll (Colo.), Celler (N.Y.), Chudoff (Pa.), Dollinger (N.Y.), Douglas (Calif.), Eberharter (Pa.), Havenner (Calif.), Huber (Ohio), King (Calif.), Multer (N.Y.), O'Brien (Mich.), O'Hara (Ill.) and Shelley (Calif.).

Before passage, Representative Burdick made a futile attempt to have the bill sent back to committee, declaring, "You can't legislate over the mind of man." Recommittal was overwhelmingly shouted down.

The bill's sponsor, Representative Wood (D., Ga.) is chairman of the Un-American Activities Committee. Representative Walter (D., Pa.) second ranking Democrat on that committee, declared, "There is nothing in this bill that in any wise attempts to regulate thought or expression."

Walter said the Administration bill only repeated what had been in the Hobbs bill and other legislation the House approved in recent years—which Celler denied.

Only three amendments were added to the bill, two of them by the committee. The third, by Cavalcante (D., Pa.), specifically made Government employes subject to prosecution any time within 10 years after leaving Government service if they violated the bill's provisions.

The debate indicated that the House favors the tightest possible kind of anti-Communist controls and it indicated strong support for developing moves by the Un-American Activities Committee to probe deeper into communism.

Representative Nixon (R., Calif.) came in for special praise from a half-dozen House members for his work in anticommunism, particularly that concerned with the indictment of former State Department Official Alger Hiss who was convicted of perjury in denying he passed documents to a Communist spy ring.

Nixon later indicated that he was not completely satisfied with the testimony given to the Un-American Activities Committee on Monday by Lee Pressman, former general counsel of the CIO.

Pressman has admitted being a Communist here in 1934-35, and said he later had dealings with Communist leaders until the Korean War. He now has "broken completely" with Communist ideology, he said.

The staff of the committee yesterday conferred with Louis F. Budenz, former Communist Daily Worker editor, who had named Pressman, among many others, as a Communist.

Previously, it was said Budenz had not been questioned in detail about Pressman.

Nixon said he expected the committee also will recall Nathan Witt, Charles Kramer, Henry Collins and others who have previously refused to testify before the House committee about alleged Communist associations.

If sufficient "leads" develop, it was indicated, there is a possibility the committee may ask to continue its investigation after Congress adjourns.

Publicity Agent Defies Committee

New Princess Gets Name and Ration Number

London, Aug. 29 (AP).—Princess Elizabeth and Prince Philip named their new daughter Anne Elizabeth Alice Louise today.

The government food office entered her in its records, for rationing purposes, as No. MAPM/396.

The baby princess, like all other British babies, also got some government-subsidized orange juice concentrate and cod liver oil.

The names were disclosed when Philip signed the birth certificate at Clarence house, the young couple's London home. The date for christening is still undisclosed.

The full title of the little princess, who was born just two weeks ago, is "Her Royal Highness Princess Anne Elizabeth Alice Louise of Edinburgh." Her father, whose title of prince is a courtesy only, is officially the Duke of Edinburgh.

The princess is third in line for the British throne, behind her mother and brother, Prince Charles. If she ever succeeds to it, she will be the first Queen Anne since the Anne who ruled from 1704 to 1714.

Although members of the royal family often go by a christian name other than the first on the list, the little princess is expected to be known as Anne.

The most likely alternative would be Elizabeth, which would be confusing, since there already is a Queen Elizabeth and a Princess Elizabeth.

New Law Jails First Jacksonville Commie

Jacksonville, Fla., Aug. 29 (AP).—The only registered Communist in Duval County was sentenced today to 90 days on the city prison farm for entering the Jacksonville city limits.

Alexander W. Trainor, 54, machinist, pleaded innocent to the charge he is a Communist. A new ordinance forbids Communists to enter the city limits. Trainor's certificate of registration to vote in last May's Democratic primary lists him as Communist Party State secretary.

Unification Aided In Korea, Says Leva

Chicago, Aug. 29 (U.P.)—Assistant Secretary Marx Leva, defending the Defense Department before the critical Veterans of Foreign Wars, said today that unification made possible mobilization at an unprecedented speed for the Korean war.

Leva addressed the VFW annual encampment to offset criticism which has led the veterans group to draft a resolution demanding the ouster of Leva's boss, Defense Secretary Louis Johnson.

Delegates who heard Leva speak are scheduled to vote on the resolution Wednesday.

Leva did not allude to the incident in which a message of Gen. Douglas MacArthur dealing with the Formosan situation was killed by President Truman before it could be read before the VFW.

But Leva did choose words of MacArthur himself to stress the fact that the United States had acted with all possible speed to send reinforcements to Korea.

He quotes MaMcArthur:

"I do not believe that history records a comparable operation which excelled the speed and precision with which the Eighth Army, the Far East Air Force and the Seventh Fleet have been deployed to a distant land for immediate commitment to major operators. . . ."

Lieut. Kean

D. C. Officer Is Promoted For Valor

A Washington soldier received a battlefield promotion in Korea yesterday and it was his father who pinned on the bars.

Lieut. Kean

Maj. Gen. William B. Kean, from second to first lieutenant for "outstanding leadership and courage under fire."

No details of the action for which Kean was promoted were available.

The promotion was ordered by Col. Henry G. Fisher of Los Angeles, the younger Kean's regimental commander.

Mrs. Annette M. Kean, 1629 Columbia rd. nw., the general's mother, and Lieut. Kean's grandmother, said her grandson had been commissioned September 23, 1949, when he was graduated from the Fort Riley, Kan., officers candidate school. He was transferred to Fort Benning, Ga., and sent to Japan early this spring.

General Kean and his wife have been overseas for the past two years, Mrs. Kean said.

New Signs Today Show Extension Of Two Avenues

City street sign crews will begin today at 7:30 a. m. changing the names of B st. se., and B st. ne. to Independence ave. and Constitution ave., respectively.

Independence ave. now becomes B st. se. and Constitution ave. becomes B st. ne. at the Capitol and run to the Anacostia River.

The commissioners' suggestion to thus lengthen the two major avenues was subject of a public hearing last June 19. The two thoroughfares will have increased importance with the planned development of the East Capitol area.

2 County School Heads Transferred

Transfer of two Prince Georges County school principals and appointment of another as acting principal was announced yesterday by Superintendent G. Gardner Shugart.

Wilbur A. Jones, principal of Marlboro High School for 10 years, will become principal of Bladensburg High School. He succeeds C. Paul Barnhart, who resigned to accept an administrative position with the Washington County school system.

Taking Jones' place in Marlboro will be Thomas F. Donohue, jr., principal of Lyndon Hill Junior High School for five years. Miss Sarah Leiter, guidance counselor at Lyndon Hill, will become acting principal there.

Nurse Is Up Same Day After Rare Operation

Philadelphia, Aug. 29 (U.P.)—A 29-year-old nurse was in "excellent condition" today after a rare operation in which an opening between the right and left side of her heart was closed.

Hahnemann Hospital reported that Mrs. George F. Longacre of Shartlesville, Pa., mother of two children and an operating room nurse at the Pennsylvania State Tuberculosis Sanitarium at Hamburg, Pa., already was up and about her room, the same day the delicate operation was performed.

Bonds Returned

A Human Is One Man's Best Friend

Paul M. Hawkins' faith in human nature got a big boost yesterday when $3000 in bonds he lost in a bank were returned.

Hawkins

The honest man was W. A. Dixon, 44, a payroll clerk in the sewer division of the District government.

The loss occurred in the Munsey Trust Co., 1329 E st. nw. Hawkins, a 33-year-old attorney who lives at 2028 37th st. se., had taken $5000 in Government bonds to be cashed.

He signed $2000 worth, then turned away from the counter for a moment. When he turned back, the other $3000 had disappeared.

Police were called. Hawkins was telling them the sad story when the bank got a call from Dixon that he had found the bonds.

Dixon said he found the bonds just inside the bank door. How they got there remained a mystery. Hawkins didn't much care. He was too happy

"You don't find honest people too often in Washington," he told Dixon, promising to send him a reward.

German Woman Seeks To Fight Communists

London, Ontario, Aug. 29 (U.P.)—A 38-year-old German woman, who survived wartime imprisonment in Russian concentration camps, tried to join the army today because "I want to kill Communists."

An army recruiting sergeant told Mrs. E. Tuletz they weren't accepting women at present for the nation's special United Nations forces.

Chinese Reds Would Fight, Pravda Says

Moscow, Aug. 29 (U.P.)—Pravda reported from Peking today that American planes had bombed targets on the Mancurian side of the Yalu River on purpose and warned that the Chinese people are ready to fight to defend their territory.

The Communist Party paper also quoted a Chinese political leader as saying that the American "warmongers must be curbed" and "the partisans of the peace camp can and will do that."

Under the headline, "impudent provocation of American warmongers," Pravda gave a prominent spot to the report from the Chinese Communist capital on the alleged United States raids. The Yalu River boundary separates North Korea from Manchuria.

The correspondent, I. Vysokov, said "the provocation does not bear an incidental character, but follows a definite plan . . . the murderous flight over China's peaceful cities had caused profound indignation . . .

"The Chinese people, ardently supporting the Central People's government . . . assert their readiness to defend the integrity and invidiability of the republic's territory."

Czech Paper Says Reds Will March Into Tibet

Prague, Czechoslovakia, Aug. 29 (U.P.)—The Czech newspaper Svobodni Slovo said flatly today that the Chinese people's army "is ready to march into Tibet."

The paper, which speaks for Czech socialists, said British and American "agents had staged a putsch in Tibet—after their unsuccessful business venture with Chiang Kai-Shek. . . .

"The strategic position of Tibet and its uranium ore stimulated the Washington strategists to gain influence over Tibet. A year ago an American expedition was sent to Tibet headed by an agent of the O.S.S., Lowell Thomas, who modestly called himself a 'radio commentator.'"

The article went on to say that Chinese Communists had warned that any country receiving Tibetan missions would be regarded as an enemy of Chnia. It did not make clear who had recevied a Tibet mission, but it added, "now the Chinese people's army is ready to march into Tibet."

Astrologers Gaze Into Future, See War Likely After 1953

Los Angeles, Aug. 29 (U.P.)—Astrologers holding their national convention here came up today with a couple of tips for the Nation's political and business leaders.

World War III, said Federation president Edna L. Scott, is not imminent. But she added:

"From 1953, on, we should be fearful of a world war. After then war clouds will gather."

As for business, Mrs. Scott said there would be "low pressure or depression cycles" until 1953, but after then she predicted there will be an "excellent business cycle."

Belgian Leader Enlists For Korean Fighting

Brussels, Belgium, Aug. 29 (AP).—Belgium's drive for 1000 volunteers to go to Korea got a big boost today. Former Minister of Defense Henri Noreau de Melen signed up.

Said the ex-defense minister: "I feel it is not possible to leave to American soldiers alone the job of supporting the action of the United Nations in Korea. It would be indecent to content oneself with negotiations."

De Melen was one of the first to volunteer as the government announced it would start recruiting for the 1000-man detachment in September, would train the troops for two months and then would send them to join United Nations forces fighting in Korea.

Filipino Advance Unit Leaves for Tokyo

Manila, Aug. 29 (AP).—An advance group of the Philippines army left today for Tokyo to prepare for sending the 1200-man Tenth Battalion combat team to Korea.

Col. Jaime Velasquez, deputy chief of service group, Philippine army, headed the 10-member delegation. They will consult with General MacArthur on plans for directing the Filipinos against the North Korean Communists.

The advance group plans to stop on Formosa en route to Tokyo.

Korean Crisis Halts Byrd Expedition Plans

Richmond, Va., Aug. 29 (AP).—The Korean situation has halted, temporarily, at least, his plans for another Antarctic expedition, Rear Admiral Richard E. Byrd said today.

"For many reasons this is not the time to make a major Antarctic trip," Byrd told the Richmond News Leader.

Byrd said he had completed prior to the Korean outbreak a report to the Joint Chiefs of Staff on the possibility of sending an expedition to the South Polar region. As planned, the objectives would have been to study cold weather battle conditions and to look around for uranium.

8100 Join Canada's Special Brigade

Ottawa, Aug. 29 (AP).—The Canadian Army said today its special brigade, which may see action in Korea, now has a strength of 8100 men.

Originally the target was for between 4000 and 5000 men but the army decided to keep on recruiting, particularly men in the trades and specialists classes. This recruiting still is going on.

Vatican Denies Plan To Move From Italy

Vatican City, Aug. 29 (U.P.).—Reports that the headquarters of the Catholic Church might be moved to another country in the event of war were denied today by a Vatican official.

Pope Pius XII will remain in Rome, no matter what a new war might bring, the official said.

found it necessary to make it on the floor in order to protect the press in an adequate characterization of the man and his statement.

"This situation comes under the category of arguing the right of way with a skunk which is never desirable, but it is even more interesting to look behind the scenes and see who is pulling the strings."

Brewster's blast was his first official move in connection with the wiretapping inquiry. But apparently it brought no nearer the day when Brewster might become a witness in the current wiretapping hearings. Brewster indicated no plan to appear. Chairman Claude Pepper (D., Fla.) of the investigating committee, said Brewster would be welcome to appear, but the committee has not considered asking him, because such an invitation from a committee to a Senator would seem like a summons.

Pepper thus left open the possibility that the weight of the inquiry may center to the end on Metropolitan Police Lieut. Joseph W. Shimon. The latter, brought upon the committee's public carpet for his second day, was threatened at one point with a contempt citation by District Chairman Matthew M. Neely (D., W. Va.) for the way he shouted at Pepper.

Pepper also told reporters the committee might decide to forward its records to the Justice Department for consideration of possible perjury action. He said the file shows "glaring inconsistencies." He also indicated the current phase of the inquiry may soon end, tapering off this week or next. Committee Counsel Gerhard P. Van Arkel leaves today for a vacation in Europe, Pepper pointed out. He added that Martin Fay, a Boston lawyer who has done investigative work for the bar association there, will join the committee staff as an investigator today.

Late in yesterday's hearing Lappin was called to a chair near Shimon and denied ever having shadowed Brewster in 1947. A main object of the Pepper probe has been indicated as that of trying to link the purpose of Shimon's wire tapping with the Brewster committee's investigation in 1947 of Howard Hughes, the millionaire plane manufacturer. The committee, in line with this aim, still is seeking a missing witness, Henry Grunewald, former FBI man and friend of Shimon, according to the lieutenant. Shimon insisted anew yesterday that his only interest when he and aides tapped phones of Hughes' associates was to discover Lappin's motice for "shadowing" Senator Brewster. This shadowing Lappin denied.

As he left the hearing, Lappin was served with a subpena to appear before the Federal Grand Jury here today. The grand jury let a three-year statutory limit for indictments in the Hughes wire tapping pass without making charges, but is understood to be going into other phases.

Shimon was scolded sharply for being six minutes late at yesterday's hearing. The scolding came from Neely, who has dished up similar rebukes to his committee colleagues several times. Shimon said his lateness was unintentional, and his lawyer, Robert E. Lynch, said Shimon had gone to the different hearing room used the day before.

The hearing will be resumed today, at 10 a. m. in Room 457 of the Senate Office Building. Shimon and Police Chief Robert J. Barrett are to be heard. Barrett has been called to recount earlier testimony that he never gave Shimon an order to report for an assignment to Senator Brewster, and that he never knew of the assignment at the time.

Neely's threat of a contempt citation came after Shimon twice tangled with Pepper. The latter was trying to pin Shimon down on details of how the order to report to Brewster was given. At one point Pepper remarked to Shimon, "your mind is remarkably acute on certain details and remarkably inacute on others."

Shimon retorted it was "insignificant" whether he got the order to see Brewster from headquarters in person, or got a message, but "I'm telling you I couldn't go there without an order from across the street (headquarters)."

Then as Pepper drawled, "Oh, now you're presuming," Shimon shouted back, "You're just trying to cloud the issue."

Needling Question

Later Pepper, after a series of needling questions about Shimon's police experience, asked: "Yet, you didn't observe where the office (of Senator Brewster) was?"

Shimon flared up: "That's a pretty safe question for you, that was three or four years ago." And Senator Neely moved into the wrangle to declare: "I move that he be instructed to proceed in an orderly, gentlemanly way, or I'm going to move that he be prosecuted for contempt."

Then to Shimon, Neely barked: "That's the second outburst we've had from you, and there's no reason for fussing at the chairman of this committee."

"He's fussing at me," growled Shimon, while Attorney Lynch purred, "Just take it easy."

In the following calm, Senator Estes Kefauver (D., Tenn.) began asking Shimon to whom the officer reported on his trailing of Lappin in 1947.

"I didn't report to anybody. I didn't report to Senator Brewster. I didn't call him in any way. About this time we were through. Senator Brewster was not in the city."

Shimon said that when he set out to determine Lappin's motive for shadowing Brewster it would have been useless to ask Lappin what he was up to. As for arresting Lappin for investigation: "He would have said 'I'm not following the Senator' and he could have turned around and sued me and sued the senator for false arrest." Shimon declared.

Never Called Shimon

Shimon said Senator Brewster never called him or made any other attempt to find out the result of the investigation of Lappin. "I should think he would have been interested," Shimon mused, "but when I was through with the case, I called his office, and he was not in the city and he has never called me since."

Senator Neely took up a stormy pursuit of the question why Shimon never reported to Brewster about the Lappin trailing, and why it was that Shimon's expenses—$283.20—was spent by Shimon for rooms in the Carlton and Mayflower Hotels near those used by Hughes' associates—were paid by Brewster.

Neely said Shimon's failure to report was the most "extraordinary" and "remarkable" story he had ever heard. As for Brewster's payment of the expense money, Shimon testified he called Brewster's office to find out how the Senator wanted it handled, and later was paid through Mrs. Frances Dustin, the Senator's secretary.

[Pepper said she may be heard next Tuesday.] Shimon suggested that if Brewster had wished, the senator could have given Shimon a letter to be filed by Shimon with a voucher to collect the expense money from the Police Department's fund. He said such expenses are usually paid on voucher from that fund, but in a number of cases they are paid by the complainant.

Lived in Grunewald's Suite

Shimon also testified that for a period in 1948 he lived in Grunewald's suite at the Washington Hotel. He pointed out it was not used by Grunewald as a residence, but as an office suite, with Grunewald living at the Westchester. Shimon said he paid Grunewald no rent for the bedroom he used. Shimon said Gruenwald let him stay there until he could find an apartment.

Shimon said he never discussed the Hughes wiretapping with Grunewald before it began coming out in the paper a year ago.

While staying at the Washington Hotel, Shimon said, he never knew and never inquired what kind of business was being done in the office portion of the suite. "What's strange about that?" exclaimed Shimon." I'm not going into my friends' personal business, why should I?"

Neely asked Shimon if he had ever heard Grunewald called "The Dutchman." Shimon said he had heard that, but he called Grunewald "The Colonel." He denied ever telling officers who worked for him that he was going to Capitol Hill to see "The Dutchman."

How He Decided

In answer to a question by Kefauver, Shimon said he discovered what phones to tap at the Carlton and Mayflower by determining whom Lappin was calling. He said he trailed Lappin to those places in "covering" Lappin's shadowing of Brewster.

Lappin said flatly "I did not" ever shadow Brewster. He denied he was ever paid for shadowing Brewster, or that he ever tapped a phone or shadowed anyone. He said he knew Hughes and some of Hughes' aides. He placed the conversation with Senator Bailey at a time when Bailey, as head of the Interstate Commerce Commission, was opposing a bill supported by Brewster and Pan-American Airlines to license but one airline for overseas service. Hughes later charged, and Brewster denied, that Brewster offered to call off the 1947 Senate probe of Hughes' war contracts if Hughes would agree to merge his TWA airline with Pan-American.

Lappin said Hughes once asked his advice about hiring a lawyer. Lappin gave a name, but the lawyer asked an exhorbitant fee and was not hired.

Lappin also told the committee he would check his records for dates in 1947 given by Shimon as dates he was trailing Lappin and "I'll try to prove this story is made out of whole cloth."

Self-Service Gas Approved

The District Commissioners yesterday approved cautiously worded regulations that will allow self-service gasoline stations to operate in the District.

The regulations, subject of public hearings and considerable controversy in filling station circles last spring, were approved on recommendation of Engineer Commissioner Brig. Gen. Gordon R. Young. They will become effective immediately as amendments to the police regulations.

District officials said no applications for self-service stations in Washington are on file now.

In the interest of fire safety, the new regulations bar the use of coin-operated pumping devices and pumps which do not shut off when an operator removes his hand from the nozzle lever.

All gasoline pumping equipment used in "serve-yourself" stations must have the prior approval of the District Fire Marshal, the commissioners ruled.

Other safeguards spelled out in the new order include:

1. At least one attendant must be on duty to supervise each six pumps;

2. Each vending machine must have an automatic shut-off nozzle with a vacuum-operated overflow valve so designed to prevent liquids from spilling over while a tank is being filled;

3. Individual switches must be provided to shut off each vending machine, and

4. No vehicle may be filled on the roadway, sidewalk or public alley except in an emergency.

Chief opponents of customer-operated stations have been the operators of the conventional filling stations.

American Automobile Association spokesmen testified before the commissioners that a recent survey showed self-service stations are selling gasoline from 3 to 5 cents cheaper than conventional stations.

Policeman Is Fined By Board as Drunk

From Trial Board

Officer, Petro Foe, Learns Fate Today

Police Pvt. John U. Carroll, who earned the rare distinction of flattening Boxer Danny Petro, will learn this morning whether the episode has kayoed his police career.

At 9:30 this morning Carroll will hear the results of an eight-hour session before a police trial board yesterday. Carroll is also awaiting word from the retirement board in connection with a wartime knee injury.

Carroll was suspended after an early-morning fracus in his Chili Ranch, 729½ 11th st. se. August 11.

According to Carroll, Petro, a District featherweight, slugged a customer, Bernard Swerkes, 1200½ Pennsylvania ave. se.

While trying to make peace, Carroll testified he knocked Danny through a screen door and was himself kicked by Danny's chum, Carl Bridensteine, of 1140 Oats st. ne. Petro and Bridenstein were later convicted of disorderly conduct.

The 29-year-old policeman was called yesterday to answer charges of failing to arrest Petro for slugging Swerkes, failing to arrest Bridenstein for kicking him, failing to arrest Swerkes for being drunk, failing to report a personal injury to a superior, prejudicing the good order of the police department in giving Swerkes a drink, taking a drink himself and operating the Chili Ranch while on sick leave.

Fourteen witnesses testified before the board made up of Inspector William Cunningham, Captain Beverly Beach and Captain Thomas Edward.

Carroll insisted he arrested Petro and Bridensteine but they got away and rearrested them when they returned. He said he didn't arrest Swerkes because he didn't think he was drunk.

He said he and Swerkes took a drink because they needed it after the fight. Carroll claimed the restaurant was closed at the time but prosecution witnesses testified that members of the Petro party were served buttermilk and coffee when they returned.

As for not reporting his injury, Carroll said he was suspended before he could report to his Ninth Precinct captain but had reported fully at headquarters. He said the Department knew he managed the Chili Ranch and added that doctors' instructions when he went on sick leave didn't conflict with his activities there.

Pvt. Harvey T. Wright, 37, was found guilty and fined $50 by a police trial board yesterday on a charge of being unfit for duty as a result of intoxication.

Testimony before the board showed Pvt. Harvey T. Wright, 37, was off duty August 22, when he tried to arrest Leroy G. Pipkin, 1119 15th st. S., Arlington, for a traffic violation.

However, according to regulations, a policeman must at all times be fit for duty.

Pipkin told the board Wright was "raving and ranting."

Sergt. Charles B. Kimball and Corp. Robert W. Smith, called to the scene, testified they thought Wright was drunk.

Dr. G. R. Weller, a police surgeon, said he gave Wright several intoxication tests. One involved saying phrases like "Methodist Episcopal" and "around the ragged rock the rugged rascal ran."

Wright didn't do so well, said the doctor. Asked how drunk the policeman was, the physician replied:

"If I were rating them one to 10—if one were very erect and 10 flat on his face—I would give him a rating of 3 to 5."

Testifying in his own behalf, Wright admitted he had split a half pint with some friends during the day, but added: "I doubt even if a person didn't have a drink he could get perfect on that test."

Policeman Found Guilty Of Losing Fingerprint

A policeman with 16 years service yesterday was found guilty by the trial board of making an untrue statement to a superior officer but was let off with a warning.

Pvt. Howard L. Pilling, 40, was charged with losing a fingerprint which he had taken at 2601 Calvert st. nw. in a housebreaking case and then indicating in a report that he never got the print.

Police later found a black card containing the fingerprint in the Calvert st. apartment, testimony showed.

Commissioners Back Policeman's Suspension

The Commissioners yesterday approved the suspension of Police Pvt. James L. Turner, 26, of the Thirteenth Precinct.

Turner, who lives at 642 7th st. ne. and has been a policeman for two years, was suspended August 15 by Lieut. William F. Rector after residents of the 1800 block of Florida ave. nw. complained he drew a gun on them during an argument.

Turner was on sick leave at the time of the incident. Police officials said no date has been set for a trial board hearing, at which the policeman will answer to a charge of conduct prejudicial to the good order of the Police Department.

New Prince Georges Magistrate Sworn in

Robert W. McCullough, Beaver Heights attorney, was sworn in as Prince Georges trial magistrate last night in ceremonies in the court room of the County Service Building, Hyattsville.

The new magistrate, appointed by Governor Lane for a four-year term, was sworn in by W. Waverly Webb, clerk of the County Circuit Court. McCullough succeeds Magistrate Arthur P. Owens, who is retiring August 31.

Two Arlington Boys in Hospital After Setting Off 'Dead' Shell

Two 10-year-old Arlington boys yesterday had learned the difference between a .38-caliber dumdum bullet and a "dead" cartridge shell—the hard way.

One was in Episcopal Eye, Ear and Throat Hospital with a "very good prospect" of retaining vision in his left eye. The other had been discharged from Arlington Hospital after treatment for shell fragments lodged in his left hand.

The youths are Michael Newman, son of Dr. and Mrs. Sigmund Newman, and Kendrick Sanders, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry K. Sanders, of different apartments at 2035 N. Woodrow st., Arlington.

Jacqueline Sanders, a sister of young Kendrick, said her brother found the "dead" cartridge about two months ago near the Woodrow st. apartment building.

Since then, she said, he "sold" it to Michael for a letter opener and 25 cents. On Monday, in the early afternoon, the boys were playing with the shell. They tied a piece of string around it, hitched the string to a coathanger, and hung it on a closet door in the Sanders apartment.

Then, with the idea of melting the remaining lead down, they lit the string. The shell blew up, and injured both boys. Kendrick is in good condition after treatment at Arlington Hospital.

Michael was treated at Arlington and later removed to Episcopal where physicians said his chances for retaining vision of his injured eye were good. A shell fragment struck him near the mouth, traveled upward and scraped the back of his eye.

Victory in Korea Seen by Tydings

Senator Millard Tydings (D., Md.) said last night he believed "we are winning our fight in Korea."

He called the present ability of the United States to stop the North Koreans and launch counterattacks after starting 60 days ago "with nothing," a military feat "of the very first magnitude."

Senator Tydings spoke to more than 800 Prince Georges County Democrats—precinct and district campaign workers—who jammed the Prince Georges Country Club to hear him and other State and local party candidates.

Tydings announced he would formally launch his campaign for reelection Thursday at 10 p. m. over a Washington radio and television station.

The other major speaker last night was Maryland's Governor W. Preston Lane, jr., who drew most of the applause.

He regretted that his current battle for the Democratic nomination in the September 18 primary had been characterized "gutter politics." Lane has been verbally sparring with George Mahoney, his princpal Democratic opponent.

The Governor looked over his three and one half years in office and cited improvements in schools, mental institution and roads.

In the past four years, he said, 43 new schools and additions have either been built, started, or will be begun shortly in Prince Georges County.

Another speaker last night was State Senator L. Harold Sothoron. Representative Lansdale G. Sasscer (D., Md.) introduced the speakers.

Last night the party workers unanimously approved a slate of State and local Democratic candidates already endorsed by the Democratic State Central committee of Prince Georges County, including a county ticket led by Sothoron.

Parking Lot Delay Asked By Merchants

The Montgomery County Council last night was asked by business and property owners to delay until May, 1951, the purchase of any off-street parking facilities in Bethesda, Md.

The request was made at a meeting originally called by County Manager Irving G. McNayr to explain to town residents the provisions of the off-street parking lots bill which went into effect August 15.

McNayr said he hoped that those attending the meeting would form a committee to assist in negotiation for purchase of parking lots using a $500,000 bond issue provided by terms of the bill. But after the request for delay was advanced, he said the arguments against immediate purchase had "a lot of merit."

McNayr said he would transmit to council the tenor of the session.

Walter Bogley, president of the Bank of Bethesda, made the suggestion for delay of parking lot purchase until the council's legislative session next May. He said that at that time a more flexible bill could be provided, or the existing bill amended.

His views were those of the majority of approximately 75 persons who attended the session.

Marvin Simmons, president of the Bethesda Chamber of Commerce, suggested that in the meantime, the council might rent or lease lots to take care of Bethesda's immediate parking needs.

According to existing plans for lot purchase, the off-street parking would be spread the length and breadth of Wisconsn ave. The business and property groups represented at last night's session said that it would be more beneficial to the town to condense the lots in the central business area, rather than spread them out.

Montgomery Collects 99% Of Tax Bills

Montgomery County collected 99.52 percent of all taxes it levied in the 1949-1950 fiscal year, the County Council announced yesterday.

Council President Frederic P. Lee said it was perhaps the best collection record in county history. Of a total levy of $6,324,653, Montgomery collected $6,294,570, the council statement showed.

Collections of real estate taxes —a part of the total levy—were 99.96 percent complete during the year, with $5,457,625 billed and $5,455,320 collected.

A total of $134,791 was realized out of $144,794 billed in personal property taxes for a 93.09 percent average. Corporation taxes yielded $549,903 out of a billing of $560,940 or a collection rate of 98.03 percent.

During its meeting in the County Courthouse, the council appointed these four men as rookie policemen at an annual salary of $2600; Raymond H. Bladen, 29, of Gaithersburg, Md.; Robert L. Sandage, 28, of 1251 Meigs st. ne.; James W. Embrey, jr., 21, of 6009 Walhounding rd., Glen Echo and Calvert L. Heil, 23, of Spencerville, Md.

Three women were appointed to the County Health Department. Miss Margaret H. Spencer of Curdsville, Va. and Miss Velia Carrigan, of 4204 South 12th rd., Arlington, were named Public Health Nurses, and Mrs. Helen E. Johnson a clerk-typist.

The Council also rezoned from residental A to commercial three pieces of land on the east side of Georgia ave.

44 Witnesses Called In Contempt Trial

King George, Va., Aug. 29 (AP).—The Commonwealth and the defense today summoned a total of 44 witnesses to appear here Friday for the trial of King George Commonwealth's Attorney Horace T. Morrison contempt of court charge.

The contempt charge against Morrison was instituted by Judge Leon M. Bazile, of the Fifteenth Circuit, following a letter Morrison wrote to Governor Battle and released to the press in which he accused the judge of "flagrant disregard of judicial procedure."

Death To Slots

Some members of the House have described that body's vote to ban the interstate shipment of slot machines as a vote "against sin." It is quite true that no law alone can end the mulcting and racketeering associated with one-armed bandits. Not only must there be determination on the part of Federal authorities to enforce the law, there also must be cooperation from local authorities and from the public. It is practically impossible at present to prevent the machines from becoming tools of the underworld. The virtue of a Federal statute on slot machines is that it will make it easier to control the hookups with racketeers who so far have escaped prosecution by fleeing across State lines.

We hope that the Senate will assent to the House version, which is stronger than the original bill passed by the upper house. The House version makes it incumbent upon Legislatures in States where slot machines are legal to pass specific exemptions to the ban. There is nothing to prevent a Legislature from doing this, but the very fact that additional action is necessary will make it more difficult for the gambling interests to force concessions. The slot machine ban is by no means a panacea, but it is a good deal more than a vote against sin. It can be a useful supplement to whatever other Federal legislation may be recommended by the Kefauver crime investigating committee.

Merry-Go-Round

The wage-price merry-go-round is beginning to whirl again. More than 400,000 employes of General Motors will have their wages increased automatically under the company's contract with the UAW providing for cost-of-living adjustments. The Chrysler Corporation has voluntarily agreed to raise the wages of its employes, and Ford is under pressure to join the movement. No doubt the entire automobile industry will feel the effects of these wage increases. They will also give impetus to demands for comparable adjustments affecting a wide range of industries.

The rise in retail prices that began last spring and gained momentum after fighting started in Korea has reduced real wages somewhat, though not nearly so much as some labor leaders contend. Furthermore, organized labor is eager to obtain off-setting increases in money wages in advance of a possible wage freeze, and the unions are in a strong position to enforce their demands. For with business booming and labor shortages developing, many employers are prepared to pay higher wages in order to keep workers on the job. All signs point, therefore, to a return of the inflationary spiral produced by attempting to escape the pinch of higher living costs by means that lead to still higher prices and further demands for wage increases. It is a losing game for everyone, labor included, as Walter Reuther recognized when he said that GM's wage increase "will be paid in the wooden nickels of inflation and will not enable GM workers to buy any more of the necessities of life for themselves and their families."

One might well ask why unions follow a policy that inevitably results in more inflation. The answer of the union leaders is that they have to go forward in order to avoid going backward. That is to say, they cannot prevent a decline in workers' living standards unless wages are raised. If wage increases were in all cases just sufficient to offset inflationary increases in general living costs and if all employers could and would refrain from raising the prices of their products to allow for higher wage costs, adjustments could be made without adding to inflationary pressures. But these assumptions are utterly unrealistic. Experience has shown that wage increases, if substantial, are with few execptions followed by price increases.

Mr. Reuther concludes that GM's decision not to raise the prices of its automobiles in face of its wage increase "clearly demonstrates that current profits margins are sufficiently high to permit the establishment of a more equitable wage relationship without inflationary price increases." We strongly dissent from this sweeping generalization. Some concerns can afford to absorb wage increases; others may be in a position to absorb them only in part, if at all. In any case an addition to production costs that cuts into profits provides an excuse for price increases, especially at a time when consumer demands are high and money plentiful.

The Korean war and the huge defense program will inevitably result in some decline in living standards. The only practicable way to prevent some groups from improving their position at the expense of others is to establish controls over wages, profits and prices when inflation threatens to disrupt the economy. Mr. Reuther rightly insists that if it becomes necessary for labor to make sacrifices, those sacrifices should "be matched by comparable sacrifices on the part of industry." However, his assumption that profiteering and speculation are the primary causes of the present inflation is challengeable. They are contributory causes, to be sure, but the underlying reason for the current inflation is the high level of consumer income and the immense volume of liquid assets in the hands of workers as well as employers.

We agree with Mr. Reuther that higher taxes applicable to corporate profits are needed and that the President should be authorized to impose selective price controls over "those commodities most seriously affecting the cost of living." But we do not go along with his recommendation for immediate imposition of an excess profits tax, because a hastily concocted proposal might actually stimulate inflation by encouraging business concerns to indulge in wasteful expenditures. Nor do we believe that overall price control is needed at present, though it may come. If it does, it will have to be accompanied by strict control over wages to be effective.

Formosan Blues

The President has followed up the Austin offer to let the United Nations look into the situation in Formosa and has added to the Ambassador's clarification of policy. The offer and the clarification should have come earlier. Postponement has meant the piling of embarrassment upon embarrassment until the diplomatic relations of this country on Far East policy were in danger of becoming thoroughly bedeviled. While he is about it, however, Mr. Truman ought to do a complete job of ending the confusion. He ought to

1. denounce the Cairo (along with the Yalta) agreement with Chiang Kai-shek providing for the return of Formosa to China
2. hold out the hope that Formosans will have a say about their own destiny
3. make it crystal clear to the world and particularly to Asia that there is no actual or even potential alliance with Chiang Kai-shek.

Under international law the retrocession of Formosa awaits the peace treaty with Japan. When the war was over Cheng Yi accepted the Japanese surrender in Formosa and took over the administration in the name of Chiang Kai-shek pending the peace conference. His rule was so brutal that the Formosans rose in rebellion and Cheng Yi put down the rebels with bloody and horrifying severity. This was the time to take over the island pending final settlement with Japan. The next occasion was after the Communist defeat of Chiang Kai-shek; Chiang Kai-shek (and his soldiery) should never have been allowed to go to Formosa except as an exile. All these opportunities were missed. It was not till aggression in Korea threatened the peace and security of the Pacific that the President decided to neutralize Formosa by making the Seventh Fleet the policeman of the straits. A new problem will arise if the Seventh Fleet fails "to see that this is done" —that is to say, if the Chinese Communists succeed in getting across the straits.

For a number of reasons the policy-making on Formosa still requires clarification in the manner we suggest. There remains the widespread misunderstanding of the American position to which Governor Dewey last week called attention in his speech at Ottawa. Questioning is still rampant at Lake Success. General MacArthur has put a slant on the policy which is not in harmony with the presidential representations in Lake Success. Chou En-lai, Mao Tze-tung's Foreign Minister, is charging American aggression, and insists that Formosa is Chinese territory, though the Chinese Communists themselves, when they formed the government in Peking, announced to the world that all agreements of foreign powers with Chiang (which include Cairo) were null and void. All these circumstances justified the presidential invitation to the United Nations to take a hand in the issue of Formosa. But the diplomatic decks should be thoroughly cleared in the manner we have indicated so as to prepare the way for a just solution.

Soldiers Should Vote

Wherever people foregather in the United States—at lawn socials, cocktail parties, vesper services, clam bakes, community parades and in their own homes—they are likely to tell one another that if a man is old enough to fight for his country, he is old enough to vote in it. So two Republican Senators—Bridges and Saltonstall—have again raised the question of a ballot for the men in uniform overseas. They have announced that they will introduce a bill in the Senate this week to permit the fighting men to vote under the principles of the Federal laws created in the second World War. The intention can be stated in the words of Senator Bridges: "I think all of the fighting men ought to have an opportunity to vote in what seems likely to be a critical election and I'm afraid some of them won't have the chance unless there is some kind of Federal ballot."

Under the Constitution, of course, there are only State laws for voting, and the soldiers in Korea will not vote unless State laws permit them to vote. However, the Federal authority could urge the States to adopt a uniform Soldier Voting Law, and could perform the necessary mechanics for gathering the vote. But, whatever happens, there are bound to be all manner of complications, vexatious and otherwise. On August 31, 1944, this newspaper said: "As might have been expected, the soldiers' vote is affording pretexts for all sorts of pettifogging by the rival politicians and for endless quibbles in the local State election laws. Out in Ohio, for example, the State auditor, one Mr. Joseph Ferguson, has demanded that every enfranchised soldier from that State be supplied, along with his ballot, with a lead pencil." The same sort of obstructionism will doubtless be forthcoming again.

Finletter And Matthews

Navy Secretary Matthews' unfortunate speech in Boston last week is in ironic contrast to one given in the same city only a day later by Air Force Secretary Finletter. The Navy until recently at least has pictured itself as the protector of military sanity and virtue against the blitz war addicts in the Air Force. Yet, after Mr. Matthews called baldly for a preventive war, Mr. Finletter, with considerable perception and humility, called for preparedness and further strengthening of the United Nations to prevent World War III. In the one speech there is empty bombast, in the other the faith combined with realism that is the only safe course for a nation concerned with preservation of its ideals.

Apart from the moral issue and the fact that Mr. Matthews' "aggression for peace" is precisely the sort of end-justifies-the-means rationalization used by the Russians, there is a highly pertinent question: "Preventive war with what?" To talk of initiating war, at a time when the perilous state of the free world's defenses is only too apparent, is worse than fatuous; it is dangerous. Mr. Finletter, on the other hand, reflects none of the easy-victory-through-atom-bombing hokum which certain Air Force generals have preached from time to time and which apparently has infected Mr. Matthews. Mr. Finletter's is a well-balanced discussion of the relation of Korea to the broader world picture.

To be sure, one could wish that Mr. Finletter had given more recognition to the basic role of ground troops in any future conflict. He does, by indirection, acknowledge that more specialized aviation, such as tactical support, is desirable. Nonetheless, he makes a good point in asserting that the experience in Korea does not diminish the need for the kind of air force that can defend this country against air attack and a strategic force that can hit back at an enemy's warmaking capacity. The fact that Korea is in a sense a specialized operation does not lessen the necessity to be prepared for broader war.

But the real point is Mr. Finletter's recognition that there is still a chance that adequate defense measures here and throughout the Western world may prevent a broader war:

> I believe that the determination to resist the aggressive forces let loose in the world contains at least the hope that aggression may be banished. If we combine the determination not to be destroyed by aggression with the willingness to go far in agreeing to new ideas which will make aggression impossible, or at least improbable, we can have the hope that World War III will be avoided and that a regime of peace which will control these awful modern weapons of destruction will be established.

In other words, the United States must be prepared for what may [illegible] but if it ever allows cynicism to destroy its hope of peaceful settlement, it will have lost one of the main qualities which distinguishes it from the totalitarians.

Dividend Outflow

According to the Wall Street Journal, it is probably the first time in history that so much has been distributed to stockholders during what once were known as the dog days of August. Increased dividends and special dividends have become the order of the day. Companies that have been retaining a large proportion of earnings to expand and improve their facilities are loosening up. This access of liberality may be partly due to the uncertainties of the future. Business concerns may have to submit to restrictions and controls that would limit their freedom of action. Moreover, many shareholders are highly critical of the niggardly dividend policies of their companies. Facing the prospect of higher taxes, these disgruntled individuals have to be reckoned with. Liberal dividends also tend to raise the market value of a company's stock. For, though the profits ploughed back into a concern increase its future earnings, the investor whose income is derived from present dividends usually prefers cash in hand to remote and uncertain returns.

The liberal outpouring of dividends reflects confidence in the business outlook, despite increases in taxes. Likewise it will put more buying power in the hands of dividend recipients and help along a rise in retail prices, thereby encouraging the current inflation.

SEAS

Your eyes are seas,
So deep, so dark,
So beautiful I am undone,
Whether they mirror moon and dusk
Or flashing flame of sun:

Your eyes are seas,
And in their depths
I find the calm anemone
And coral wild and wilder weed
And shadowed mystery.

Your eyes are seas,
And when I walk
Before the waters up and down,
My heart is trembling in the wind
Lest in those deeps I drown.

Home Rule Apathy

It should not be too difficult to understand, and even to accord some justification for, the present degree of apathy existent among the citizens of Washington regarding local suffrage. After all, history has shown that people who are conditioned to being ruled by a select minority, or by such means that would relieve them of the responsibilities of mature deliberations, are never too eager to give up such a comfortable existence if those who are fortunate enough to be capable of such rule are contented with their plight, or conquest, and appear to be of no serious threat to individual aims and interest.

Then, too, the human emotions are of such delicacy as to be quite vulnerable to a lackadaisical whim if there is the slightest inference that designing, and possibly unscrupulous influences are at work to relegate the individual to a position of lesser importance among his fellow travelers. The desire to be a major wheel in the ever-grinding machinery of progress is supposed to be dormant or active in all of us.

But in reviewing the history of our bitter and costly struggle for freedom and independence from arbitrary rule, I find such rationalizing totally inconsistent with the American ideal and the American heritage. Surely the Founding Fathers entertained no such compromising views when they served notice to the kings and rulers of Europe that this Nation was to obtain its just powers from the "consent of the governed." And by the language incorporated in the document they wrote and proclaimed our Constitution, they were undoubtedly confident that their posterity would be ever vigilant to see that this declaration would go unchallenged and unaltered for all time.

Expanding Economy

I have read with much interest "Reader's" whittling down of Mr. Keyserling's figures, and I think that he has rendered a public service in his analyses.

Reverting to his first letter, which appeared on August 17, it appears that in a layman's nutshell every man, woman and child in the United States was, by 1948, earning some 18 percent per annum on the $1306 which, by some magic, he had borrowed from himself in the period 1939-1948. This rate of return seems too good to be true. The catch, of course, is too true to those prudent individuals, formerly called "the pillars of society," who now find that nearly half of their savings (cash and bonds, insurance, annuities, etc.), has been quietly expropriated.

No Preventive War

The Secretary of the Navy seems to think the idea of a preventive war to secure peace is a new one. The use of this particular adjective in this connection is fairly recent, but nations have tried to make their aggressive wars respectable by substituting a more palatable word.

That is not the kind of peace the American people want to seek. The search means laying aside their ideals and losing thereby all their friends along with their self-respect.

A way to secure genuine peace is before them, and the first steps can be taken at once. On June 6 a small group of Congressmen, Democrats and Republicans, presented a joint resolution declaring that the United States is determined to remain strong as long as the armaments race continues, but requesting the General Assembly of the United Nations to give its entire attention without delay to ending it. This is to be done by agreed world-wide disarmament covering every form of weapon.

When effective and enforceable disarmament and control is in effect the United States will turn over to the U. N. and advise all other nations to do the same, the sums it otherwise would have spent for weapons, to be used for development of peaceful uses of atomic energy and for technical and economic aid to undeveloped areas and countries devastated by war. The resolution is in the Foreign Affairs Committee's pigeonholes, but it will be passed if enough people demand it.

Royal Abuse

American democracy has its disadvantages, I grant you. Nonetheless, as the father of a young and attractive American girl, I can count among my blessings the fact that she can mature and marry the man of her own free choice with no hindrance by the authorities of our country. Indeed, she will have their help and blessing.

The constituted monarch of a foreign power has committed openly publicized indecencies. These have resulted in the stealing of a bride-to-be of one of his own citizens. I can not see how anyone can honestly condone such actions. When two officials of his country publicly protest (letters published August 25) that The Washington Post has slandered their monarch my indignation boils over.

I congratulate The Post for its fearless and honest interpretation of the news. I hope that the protest of these officials will only intensify your efforts to continue to publicize the activities of this royal rake. I further hope that The Post will suggest the United Nations should officially issue a public rebuke for such actions.

Alaska Land Rights

In your issue of August 21, you printed a letter from Mary Lee Council, purporting to interpret Senate amendment, Section 5 (1) to H. R. 331 known as the Alaska statehood bill. This section, introduced by Senator Butler of Nebraska, who has been bitterly opposed to statehood for Alaska, was introduced without giving the natives of that Territory or their friends an opportunity to be heard. It provides that: "Pending action by the people of Alaska and the Congress as provided in this act, no reservations for use and occupancy of the natives of Alaska shall be designated in the Territory by authority of any law of the United States . . . except by specific authorization of the Congress."

According to Miss Council, this language "would have the effect of holding in abeyance for a probable maximum period of two years the power of the Secretary of the Interior to create reservations in Alaska under the 1936 act . . ." She argues that this is merely a suspension of the exercise of the power given to the Secretary of the Interior under the 1936 law and "not a repeal."

I regret that I must dissent vigorously from this interpretation which is not an interpretation. The best that can be said for this amendment is that its meaning is doubtful, as its introduction and acceptance by the Senate committee was dubious. There is no language in the section which in positive terms provides that the Secretary of the Interior shall automatically have the power to create new reservations upon the fulfilling of the conditions.

Certainly, there is no warrant for Miss Council's interpretation that the suspension of this right would be "for a probable maximum period of two years." I suspect that this is not even wishful thinking on the part of Miss Council. Probably, like her employer, Delegate E. L. Bartlett, she is opposed to the setting up of any more reservations. Certainly, there is enough doubt as to the interpretation that some court in the future may put upon this clause, to call either for its repeal or the adoption of clarifying language.

But why even suspend for an indefinite period—not even for two years as Miss Council pretends—a law that gives the Secretary of the Interior the power to correct the injustices suffered by the Alaska natives since the treaty of purchase with Russia until President Roosevelt saw to it in 1936 that the terms of that treaty should be honorably complied with? Even Secretary Chapman's quoted statement, that he will not create any more reservations in Alaska until a national policy regarding Indians is reconsidered thoroughly, is no excuse for this attempted congressional impairment of the rights that have been vested since 1936.

There can be little doubt that this amendment represents a sneak effort to get rid of the 1936 act, which the fishing and other interests in Alaska, to say nothing of Governor Gruening and Delegate E. L. Bartlett, who employes Miss Council as his secretary, have done their best to vitiate. Of course, these interests and these individuals, except Governor Gruening, who as a presidential appointee is under a moral duty either to follow declared Administration policy, or resign, have the right to oppose the 1936 law. But they ought to do so by direct attack and not by a weasel-worded amendment to the Alaska statehood bill that probably does not mean what Miss Council and others pretend that it means.

All doubt ought to be resolved, in favor of the Alaska natives, by defeating this amendment. Failing this, it seems to me that President Truman should veto the bill, which would be in line with other protective vetoes of his of previous ripper bills. This is simply the latest of a series of acts, participated in by the same interests and persons, the ultimate effect of which will be to strip the Alaska natives of land holdings and fishing and other rights that have not been already nailed down by the creation of reservations under the 1936 act, in assisting in the passage of which, President Roosevelt left no stone unturned.

Incidentally, Miss Council says nothing about the obligation imposed upon the United States by the treaty of purchase to protect and assure the rights and privileges of our newly-acquired Alaskan citizens. After all, under the Constitution, a treaty is the supreme law of the land.

Youth Stakes Its Claim

By Malvina Lindsay

Voice In Tomorrow

FOR ONCE you enter a meeting of serious intent where the faces are nearly all unlined, eager, young. A sort of spy from the adult world, you have come to get some clews as to "whither are we drifting?"

For these 75 young people and those they represent are likely to put a strong imprint on tomorrow. These are leaders in their colleges, churches, communities from 20 States. A few are freshly back from the World Assembly of Youth at Istanbul. Some are going on to national conferences of their organizations. Youth is expressing itself widely just now on many fronts, though congressional lawmakers a stone's throw from this conference may smile patronizingly at what it says.

In fact this conference in the Capital is another watermark in the rising tide of democratic procedure in this country. For the first time since White House Conferences on Children and Youth began in 1909, youth's organizations have been invited to send consultants to help find ways to meet youth's needs, solve some of its problems. Four hundred young delegates will sit in on the Midcentury Conference in December.

THE YOUNG man presiding, just back from Istanbul, is clear-voiced, direct, businesslike. He says little, but keeps things moving on schedule. Delegates speak readily and easily from the floor.

You wonder what is being written on the wall here about the future. For one thing, the notice is plain that youth wants more say in all adult doings that affect it. This same idea crops up whenever youth meets. Always the plea, "We want to be consulted instead of being given orders."

Here in a world when so many are running from responsibility, young people are asking for it. They want more say in family councils, more self-government in schools, more consultation in public affairs. Do they know what they are letting themselves in for? Will they stand up to it if it is forthcoming?

A young woman from Ohio tells of a State-wide youth conference to find out what Ohio youth wanted to say to the Midcentury Conference about the future. Ohio—a solid, conservative State if there ever was one! You had thought of it chiefly in terms of the middle-aged. Here is its youth out front in leadership in plans for the next half century.

The Ohio report is passed around. It is a fine blueprint for tomorrow. It also emphasizes that youth wants a chance at early decision and responsibility. It wants no dictatorial methods in the home or elsewhere. How strong this feeling is among young Americans! Something for Communists, other totalitarians, to note.

SUDDENLY you sense a surge of feeling in the room. The question of housing for delegates is up, and with it racial discrimination. Here is another matter on which these youth leaders generally feel strongly.

Surveys may tell of race and religious bias still running strong in colleges, but every time you have contact with youth leaders you find this strong impatience with prejudice—racial, religious, political. Possibly these leaders are only a drop in an ocean of unthinking, unconcerned youth. But they could be the creative minority that will count tomorrow.

A resolution against discrimination, including the statement that the group is "embarrassed" to have to take such responsibility of action, is adopted. There is also a call for more understanding among religious groups. And this group, like most others not yet cynical and defeatist, has faith in world cooperation and brotherhood.

Will these boys and girls have different ideas 10 or 20 years hence? And will their talk and resolutions have any permanent influence? Hasn't youth been talking and passing resolutions for decades?

Some way you feel this is different. More adults are listening now. They are even limbering up and inviting youth in to consult.

You wonder if there isn't a growing realization that youth in these days of national uncertainty must be prepared earlier for responsibility. And it could be that youth itself in its surging demand for an earlier voice in affairs—a demand that may reach to the ballot box—is recognizing that it must stake out its claim of influence in a world where so much numerical power is swinging to the middle-aged and elderly.

Rail Strike

All of the rail union executives and their subordinates should go and stick their heads in the sands of shame for striking for higher wages while our boys are fighting to keep our freedoms.

Will these union executives and their subordinates exchange places with our boys and fight for the freedoms we possess? Are they willing to accept the pay our boys are getting?

The union executives know, but will not acknowledge, that they are making conditions worse for themselves and everybody else, politically, financially and spiritually in the war effort.

It's such things as strikes that cause our boys to lose faith in the folks back home.

Baker Company

WITH UNITED STATES FORCES IN KOREA.—Baker Company of the Twenty-seventh Regiment's First Battalion was breakfasting in a cheerful mood. The morning was sunny but almost cool, and the men crowded hungrily into their front-line mess hall—a little rocky draw that gave protection from sniper fire. When the young company commander Capt. Gordon Jung, joined the chow line he was greeted with comments on the good night just passed.

"Yes, we had a quiet day altogether," Jung reflectively replied.

Possibly Baker Company's standards of quietness have been influenced by their experiences in Korea. In their first action, more than six weeks ago, they were overrun by six enemy tanks and more than 1000 infantry. Rallied by Captain Jung, they held their position until they could retire in good order, and help the rest of the battalion wipe out the attackers. That day Captain Jung earned a recommendation for the Distinguished Service Cross, and Baker Company learned that "we were better than they was," as a beardless Pfc. succinctly explained.

At any rate, the reader must judge of this quiet day, which this reporter spent as Baker Company's guest. The day began at sun-up, after an agreeably successful little night battle during which a Baker Company bazooka team polished off an enemy self-propelled gun when "they were looking right down our throat," while the rifle platoons decimated a North Korean infantry battalion charging across the rice paddies just before dawn. And for the first hours of the day it really was pretty quiet.

To be sure, a constant rattle of firing came down from the high mountain peak on the left flank, which the South Koreans were holding. To be sure, our mortars and the enemy's sometimes rather languidly lobbed shots back and forth. But in Baker Company's command post, in a leafy persimmon grove overlooking no-man's land, there was comparative peace.

WHILE those on duty maintained the alert, most of the company's 140 men and five officers slept on the hard ground, or gossiped of past fighting, or cleaned their weapons. The day's real work began rather disconcertingly in mid-afternoon.

The firing on the flanking mountain peak had long been growing less intense when suddenly South Korean troops began to filter through Baker Company's line. With a strong enemy force moving onto the heights above, the position instantly became critical. While more and more starving South Koreans drifted in, the battalion was notified; a full alert was sounded; and a South Korean officer was rounded up. The young Korean lieutenant haltingly but defiantly explained that his men had been "too many days" on the mountain without enough food or water or even ammunition. Meanwhile, Charley Company, farther down the line, reported enemy infantry already attacking them.

The battalion spoke. All companies were to rally all South Koreans in their positions, offering food, promising heavy artillery support, urging them to retake their mountain peak. With infinite difficulty and patience, Jung explained all this. The Korean lieutenant nodded curtly, called to his men, and led them back up the hill. Our mortars began their screaming in dead earnest, the 155 mm. howitzers boomed angrily, and the mountain peak was veiled in silvery and brown puffs of white phosphorous and high explosives. There was a long, anxious wait. At last the enemy fled. The flank was secure again.

BY THEN supper was over. Captain Jung, his face a little drawn, gave his instructions to his platoon leaders. The battalion had just rather grimly announced a heavy enemy attack on the artillery batteries and main supply road in the rear. But the threat of being cut off seemed to worry Jung much less than the danger on the mountain above—"if the flank goes again, we've still got hold of the front; we'll just skeletonize the rifle platoons to reinforce the heavy weapons platoon on the hill."

Meanwhile, First Sergt. George S. Hearn, a massive man with a fresh shrapnel dimple in his cheek who learned ground fighting as a lieutenant in Merrill's Marauders, passed out grenades and ammunition with a running commentary. Hearn allows liberties to those who know their business, like the lean Sergt. George Bass of the first platoon, who likes to argue that war would be more enjoyable if fought with clubs. But the younger soldiers, Hearn instructs—"Now you, Prokov, you're a messenger tonight. Regardless of what's afalling, you've got to get out to the platoons on order. But you'll be all right if you'll just learn where the platoons are at."

As dusk fell, F-80s roared down the valley under towering thunderheads, rocketing and strafing the enemy positions. Jung walked along Baker Company's hill, saying a quiet word now and again to the men in the foxholes, pausing at his forward platoon to watch a jewel-like kingfisher zigzag down its brook in terror at the rocket explosions. Then it was time to button down for the night.

AT THE command post. Sergeant Hearn and the communications men were already in their foxholes. As Jung returned, the thunderheads burst. Swearing briefly, he stretched a poncho above his own night's refuge, settled down, and telephoned his forward observer, Lieut. P. C. Rodgers. Rodgers reported an enemy force with two tanks at the far end of the valley. Incoming mortar fire suddenly crashed round about. And so the good night began.

It was a good night because Baker Company and the other men of the First and Second Battalions had hit the enemy so hard on the three nights preceding. Its goodness consisted in the failure of the discouraged North Koreans to attack in force again. But all night the attack threatened. All night the firing continued, culminating in a heavy fusillade from the enemy tanks just before dawn. And all night the rain fell, filling the foxholes, freezing the men. In the infantry you get a queer idea of a good night.

As the sun rose, Baker Company began the new day. Sergeant Hearn crept down the line to steal the rifles of any sleepers and thus teach them to remain alert. The cooks arrived with breakfast, and three men whose wounds had healed reported for duty again. A messenger from across the valley reported that one of the enemy's tanks' shells had landed in the midst of a Baker Company bazooka team, severely wounding all four men. The news was accepted, not indifferently, but as a matter of course.

"If they didn't attack all night," Captain Jung summed up, "I guess that means we are through here. I'm glad. I like going after them better than having them go after me."

Precious War Metals

By Marquis Childs

Domestic Manganese Is Vital

THERE IS one precious metal of which America has an overflowing store. In the vaults at Fort Knox, Ky., gold bars are piled rank on rank, probably the greatest treasure in the history of mankind.

Childs

But gold is a soft metal. It cannot be used in airplane motors, to line gun barrels or to harden steel. The metals for these purposes are manganese, chrome, vanadium, tungsten. These precious metals are in tragic deficiency in the so-called stockpiles ordered to be built up four years ago.

Manganese may well be the most vital of these minerals since it must go into every scrap of steel that is made. In this space recently was a discussion of the difficulties encountered by engineer-promoters seeking to develop domestic sources of manganese ore. Virtually all of America's manganese has been imported from Russia, Africa, Brazil and India.

As a result of that column a worried stockholder of the United States Steel Corp. wrote a letter of inquiry to Irving S. Olds, chairman of the board. Mr. Olds has been kind enough to send me a copy of his reply. In it he says:

"EVERYONE connected with the American steel industry would be delighted to see developed any worthwhile manganese ore deposits in this country, which are capable of being developed in a sound and economic manner. Heretofore, most of the few known manganese ore deposits in the United States have been of such low quality, or of such small tonnage, as not to be capable of producing manganese ore in competition with better manganese ore obtainable from abroad.

"I have no personal knowledge about the extent of the stockpile of manganese ore which may have been built up by the Government. We have on hand in United States Steel a satisfactory supply for our own immediate use. But this does not mean that we are not vitally concerned with the maintenance, both by the Government and by industry, of an adequate supply of good manganese ore for the future."

IN MARCH of 1948, R. M. Lloyd, assistant to the vice president of the United States Steel Corporation, testified before a House committee as to the company's position on manganese. Summing up, he said:

"At this time, because of the current high rate of demand for manganese, substantially all available domestic production and importations are required for consumption and, consequently, any large quantity of ore to be used for stockpiling necessarily must come from other than present sources. Such supplementary sources, if they could be developed to some extent domestically, would provide stockpile tonnages, and result at the same time in approaching domestic self-sufficiency with regard to manganese in the United States for the long range future."

In other words, there was no available manganese for stockpiles. It was all going into the steel being fabricated for automobile and washing machines. Domestic consumption of steel went to new high levels in the all-out boom this year, so that there could have been even less manganese available than at the time of Lloyd's testimony.

New mining and processing developments were not encouraged. They appear in some instances to have been deliberately discouraged.

ALEXANDER C. Barker, then vice president and director of H. A. Brassert & Co., for over 50 years consulting engineers to the iron and steel industry, outlined before a congressional committee a plan to develop an electrolytic process to produce manganese from low grade ores. The company had private capital for the development. They were only asking that stockpiling authorities agree to buy a part of the output. They got nowhere and the project was abandoned.

Other independent promoters and developers, some with a long record of experience, have had the same kind of frustrating response from Government. Certain of these independents believe one reason is the pressure of business-as-usual from the big companies that dominate supplies of critical metals. Chairman Olds says this is not true; that in fact "there have been numerous discussions for many months past between men in the steel industry, and representatives in the Government; about the need for the development of new or increased supplies of manganese ores from sources other than Russia, especially as there are no known deposits of high grade manganese ore in the United States of any considerable size which do not require beneficiation."

If there were differences between the independents and the big companies over this question in the past, they should be ended. All sections of the industry must work with the Government, which must be stirred out of its lethargy and incompetence to obtain the metal far more precious than gold.

'Air Attack' on D. C. Set for Sept. 11-23

Washington and its suburbs will be under "air attack" from September 11 to 23, but no bombs will be dropped, and no ack-ack will be heard from ground defense batteries.

It's to be known as Exercise Metro, a field training problem simulating the defense of a metropolitan area by units of the Thirty-fifth AAA Brigade, stationed at Fort George Meade, Md.

Second Army Headquarters said the exercise is divided into two parts. From September 5 to 10, units of the brigade will make route and position reconnaissances, conduct practice loadings and movement within the confines of Fort Meade.

Beginning September 11, the units will move from Fort Meade to tactical positions in the Washington area to set up a coordinated antiaircraft defense.

"Exercise Metro" poses this problem:

An attack is to be made on this metropolitan area by a mythical aggressor air force after the aggressor nation has overrun western Europe and established bases in the Caribbean Islands. It will be assumed that high level bombers similar to our B-29s will carry out the attack supported by F-80 type jet fighters.

The mission of the defending force, the Thirty-fifth AAA Brigade. will be to prevent, interfere with or reduce the effectiveness of the hostile aircraft. Although the weapons will be in position, firing will be simulated.

Air Force units will provide air missions to simulate hostile aircraft, but Exercise Metro is concerned only with the problem of antiaircraft defense.

Status Hit

Bill Stirs U. S. Deputy Marshals

Almost to a man, the 110 deputy United States marshals here are disgruntled over the recent passage of a Senate bill which would deprive them of Civil Service status.

Should the measure pass the House of Representatives and become law, they say, the uncertainty arising from the workings of patronage will take the place of the security they now have. Their jobs will be subject to the upheavals of any change in administration; they will be subject to summary firings, they feel.

"We have seen what has happened in our office during one change of administration," said one deputy yesterday. "We thought that mass firings would never happen again."

Partly because their jobs may soon become subject to patronage, the deputies do not want to be identified in the newspapers. But, in conversations among themselves, they are bitter and disappointed.

Several deputies have been sticking it out with but a short time to go for retirement. They can only hope, they said, that the ax will not fall before that time.

The bill, which is now before the House provides:

"Any United States marshal may appoint deputies, with the approval of the Attorney General, and without regard to the provisions of the Civil Service laws and regulations. Deputy marshals shall be subject to removal with the approval of the Attorney General . . . Deputy marshals in office upon the date of enactment of this Act shall be subject to removal by the United States Marshal, under whom they serve, with the approval of the Attorney General, and without regard to the provisions of the Civil Service laws and regulations."

Stores Open Saturdays Starting This Weekend

Downtown department and specialty stores will resume their Saturday opening schedule this week, remaining open all day on September 2, Edward D. Shaw, executive secretary of the Merchants and Manufacturers Association, said yesterday.

The stores will close on Monday, September 4, for the Labor Day holiday. They will remain open on Saturday for the remainder of the year.

Tempting Six Canned Menus Replace War II C-Ration

Tokyo, Aug. 29 (U.P.).—America's new, improved ration for field soldiers "bears scant resemblance" to the unpopular C-ration of World War II, General MacArthur's headquarters announced tonight.

The new "ration, individual, combat" contains six canned menus and weighs 6½ pounds.

The tastiest meal is meat and spaghetti, with tomato sauce. Directions—open can and warm over container of flaming gasoline and dirt until the contents bubble like lava. Remove and eat.

If boiling water is available, drop the unopened can into it. When it shows an "alarming bulge," it is ready to eat. The only problem then is to open it without burning your fingers.

If no heat can be had, the best dish is ham and eggs, with potatoes or jam and crackers. This meal comes in a can along with coffee and sugar.

Extra well-done hamburgers—three in one can—are another staple of the combat diet. Beans and frankfurters in tomato sauce are okay when heated, but are not recommended cold.

About one ration box in six contains a special delicacy—a can of chicken and vegetables.

The desserts are uniformly good, featuring cookies, candy and a variety of canned fruit in heavy syrup. The ration also includes water purification tablets, sugar and salt, cigarettes and matches, a can opener and plastic spoons, sealed in cellophane.

Another new ration, "Food Packet, Individual Assault, 1-A-1," will replace K-ration as soon as sufficient supplies are available. This is a snack meal, guaranteed to pack 900 calories in a box small enough to cram into the pocket of a fatigue uniform.

A Sailors' Dream—Waves Swabbing the Decks

Geomagnetic Station Sought

Authority to construct a geomagnetic station near Fredericksburg, Va., at a cost of $1,200,000 has been asked of Congress by the Department of Commerce.

The Army has made available a site of 174 acres on the A. P. Hill military reservation for the proposed new station—which would include an observatory, laboratory building and observers' quarters—according to acting Secretary of Commerce Thomas W. S. Davis. Davis said the station would replace the "obsolete" Coast and Geodetic station now located at Cheltenham, Md. Davis wrote House Speaker Rayburn (D., Tex.) that the Cheltenham buildings are nearly 50 years old

'Meet the Press' Sues Over Ending Program

New York, Aug. 29 (AP).—Owners of the "Meet the Press" radio program are suing Mutual Broadcasting System, Inc., for $1,250,000 damages, charging the program was replaced by a copy under a new name, "Reporters Roundup."

NBS quit carrying the "Meet the Press" program after a broadcast last August 4. On August 10 it began the new weekly program, "Reporters Roundup."

The complaint, filed in State Supreme Court, claims the new program was set up in a "scheme and plan to deprive plaintiff of his rights and benefits in the program, 'Meet the Press.'"

Liberals Want Germany in European Union

Stuttgart, Germany, Aug. 29 (AP). The World Congress of Liberal Internationals has adopted a resolution urging a European union with Germany as a "sovereign and equal member."

The resolution approved at the end of a five-day Liberal Congress said Germany's inclusion is an essential requirement and any delay "may prove to be disastrous for the survival of Western civilization."

The Congress has been attended by about 300 delegates representing Liberal parties and movements in 28 countries, including exiles from several eastern European countries under Communist rule.

Controls Conferees End Long Deadlock

ments as he deems necessary to prevent or correct hardships or inequities" in both price and wage ceiling.

The final compromise eliminated a controversial "stabilization advistry board" which Maybank's original compromise would have provided.

It had been opposed by CIO President Philip Murray.

The advisory board, which the President would have been required to consult, would have included representatives of the public, labor, agriculture and industry.

The conferees also agreed to cut duration time of the bill to June 30, 195 , as voted by the House. The Senate had voted a cutoff date of June 30, 1952, as requested by the President.

The House-Senate delegates had agreed earlier on most other provisions of the bill.

These included giving the President authority to allocate scarce materials, controls installment buying and some forms of real estate credit, make and guarantie defense production loan, and stockpile needed materials.

A Senate-approved section giving the President power to set up war labor disputes machinery will be worked out today. The House did not include the labor section.

Mayban kpredicted the conferees would retain it.

Final approval of the wage-price compromise was by voice vote, but was not unanimous. No record vote was taken Maybank said.

Although they eliminated the advisory board for selective price controls the conferees agreed to accept a Senate provision for a 10-member House-Senate "watchdog" committee to keep in close touch with the controls program.

Telephone Firm Plans Expansion In D. C. Suburbs

Baltimore, Aug. 29 (AP).—The Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Company's board of directors today approved $631,000 worth of expansion for its Shepherd and Hyattsville exchanges in the Washington suburbs.

The projects were part of a $2,657,000 program authorized for telephone facilities throughout the State.

These included $32,300 for new cable and wire facilities at Laurel, $29,600 at Hurlock, and $20,800 at Easton.

The outlay in the Washington suburban area includes $299,000 for the expansion of the rial equipment and $162,000 for new wires and cables at the Shepherd exchange, and $170,000 for dial equipment at Hyattsville.

Senators Plan To Quit Sept. 9

September 9 deadline the Senate would have to handle that explosive catch-all in a few days as against the week or more debate some think it requires.

The Senate Democratic Policy Committee at a midday conference nonetheless decided to try to meet the new deadline date.

Relaying the decision to newsmen Lucas said it ruled out action on the statehood bills and possibly universal military training legislation as well. He left the way open, however, for consideration of a limited UMT compromise if the Senate Armed Services Committee reports one.

Adjournment or Recesses?

Strictly aside from the quitting date, another point of contention arose between the House and Senate leadership.

Senate Democratic leaders opposed any formal adjournment and favored instead a series of three-day recesses, or a longer recess to a fixed date.

House Democratic leaders favor a sine die adjournment, with the President free to call Congress back at any time. They appeared willing to settle, however, for adjournment to a fixed date. The issue revolves around fears of some members in both Houses that the voters want Congress to "stay on the job."

Voter reactions meanwhile played a prominent part in the resurgence of excess profits tax sentiment in the Senate.

A vote on the special levy, which President Truman has said he does want at this time, was postponed another day while Republicans and Democrats busily polled their members. The Senate Democratic poll showed Democratic Senators favor a profits tax nearly 2 to 1. The Republican poll showed GOP Senators oppose it by the same margin. Both sides predicted the vote would be close.

Fight for Dividend Tax

Three Democratic Senators, led by Hubert Humphrey (D., Minn.), meanwhile touched off a fight for a 10 percent withholding tax on corporations that kept the Senate in session long past the dinner hour.

Joined by Senators Paul Douglas (D., Ill.) and Herbert Lehman (D., N. Y.), Humphrey charged the Senate bill opened new tax loopholes instead of closing them. He said the bill will continue "tax evasion by coupon clippers."

Senator Joseph C. O'Mahoney (D., Ill.), initial sponsor of an excess profits tax rider, told reporters that despite all the talk of a pay as you go tax program, the bill before the Senate is a "deficit bill."

Urging the profits levy as a revenue booster as well as a check on prices, he said the interim measure is already outdated by rearmament appropriations approved or on the way.

Unsound Mind Verdict Given in Forgery Case

Mrs. Zelda Shapiro, 36, of 1337 Spring rd. nw., charged with passing a $1933 bad check for an automobile, was found to be of unsound mind yesterday in District Court. Mrs. Shapiro was charged after it was discovered she had forged the name of her father-in-law, Albert Shapiro, a retired liquor dealer.

Hecht's Plans New Store in Hagerstown

By S. Oliver Goodman

The Hecht Co. plans a new branch store in Hagerstown, Md., President Samuel M. Hecht announced last night.

S. M. Hecht

Negotiations have been completed to acquire about 16 acres of unimproved land at Potomac and Northern aves. in Hagerstown, he said. The Antietam Distributing Corp. will work closely with Hecht's in the joint development of a modern shopping center now in the initial planning stages.

The new store will be a branch of the Baltimore store and is part of the expansion of the company's operation for the Baltimore area directed by J. Jefferson Miller, executive vice president and managing director of the company's Baltimore stores. At present, units also are operated in Annapolis and Easton, Md.

In addition to the Maryland stores, the Hecht Co. operates stores in Washington, Silver Spring and New York City. Under construction in Arlington, Va., is a new branch of the Washington store reported to cost $8,500,000 and to become the company's largest suburban unit with an estimated 250,000 square feet.

President Hecht pointed out that from 1947 through 1949, the Hecht Co. spent more than seven million dollars for plant moderization and expansion.

DIVIDEND: Allied Chemical and Dye Corp. declared a quarterly dividend of 50 cents on its new common stck, payable September 30 to stock of record September 8. This is equal to $2 a share paid on the old stock, which was split four for one. Payments this year on the old stock were $2 in March and a like amount in June. In 1949, Allied paid dividends of $1.50 in each of the four quarters and $4 special at year-end.

WHO'S WHO TODAY: Raymond W. Ayers of Arlington, Va., has been elected vice president of Frederick Hart & Co., Inc., a subsidiary of ATF Inc. Ayers maintains headquarters for Hart firm at 910 17th st. nw. . . . Edwin G. Nourse, former chairman of the Council of Economic Advisors, is reported completing a book on how to make private enterprise work smoothly with a minimum of Government interference. . . . Albert J. Tuohy has resigned as ace FBI investigator in the New York office to join Republic Aviation Corp. as director of the firm's security program.

R. W. Ayers

INCREASE: Holdings of common stock of U. S. Steel Corp. in the District of Columbia on June 30 totaled 204,153 shares, as compared with 203,085 at the beginning of the year. Preferred stock held here totaled 41,066 shares, against 40,209 on January 1.

ODD LOTS: The Commerce Department reported July sales of chain stores and mail order houses totaled $2,476 million, a gain of 11 percent above June and 18 percent above July last year. . . . The Western Maryland Railway has ordered 850 new freight cars, costing $4,249,356. The road recently ordered 17 Diesel electric engines for January 1 delivery "to complete the dieselization east of Hagerstown, Md." . . . Security and commodity markets will be closed Monday in observance of Labor Day. . . . The Pennsylvania Railroad asked ICC for authority to issue another $10 million in equipment trust certificates. . . . Delaware Power & Light Co. filed with SEC a registration of $12 million of first mortgage and collateral trust bonds, due 1980, to be sold at competitive bidding.

CULLET BOOM: There's a bull market in broken glass these days, Business Week reports. Reason: the strikes which have tied up many soda-ash producers. Broken glass, called cullet in the trade, is one of the materials used in manufacture of glass containers. Increased use of cullet enables smaller charges of the scarce soda-ash Cullet prices have jumped from $4 a ton to between $8 and $10 and sales to container plants have been as high as $20 a ton, the magazine reports.

New York Cotton

New York, Aug. 29 (AP).—Cotton futures pushed upward to gains of $2.90 to $4.35 a bale today in broad trading. All deliveries from December 1950 forward established new season's highs, with the near-by months closing at 39 cents a pound.

Buying was touched off in part by the declaration of Secretary of Agriculture Brannan that prices controls are not now needed on any domestically produced food or fibres. This appeared to allay fears in the cotton industry of controls and price rollbacks. Apart from this new development, futures advanced on agressive mill buying, accompanied by reports that some mills are now beginning to accept orders for cotton goods for deliveries in the second half of 1951.

Rail Worker, Once Tops in Pay, Strikes Out at Loss of Caste

By J. A. Livingston

YOU have to search far, far below the economic surface to understand the performance of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen and the Order of Railway Conductors. They're on the job today as usual. But they're not working for Messrs. Ernest E. Norris, president of the Southern Railway; Gustav Metzman, president of the New York Central; Roy B. White, president of the Baltimore & Ohio, and so on. No sir, they report to Colonels Norris, Metzman, White, and so on. They're in the Army now.

Livingston

Why, you wonder, do sensible men, who for years have been the most stable, most mature group among organized American workers, go in for such hypocrisy—in its literal meaning. Not this once, but four times in the last seven years!

The reason, it seems to me, is that the railroad industry has not kept pace with automobile, oil, television, chemical industries, with the Nation. That fact is made clear by a tabulation of the Bureau of Transport Economics and Statistics of the Interstate Commerce Commission. The railroad's share of the national income has declined steadily in the last 30 years, as follows:

Year	R.R. Share of Nat'l. Income
1929	5.30
1939	3.87

Those statistics explain why railroad workers, as a class, no longer are the patricians of the American labor movement. The railroads cannot afford to match wage rises with faster growing industries. Result: Today the railroad worker ranks seventh in weekly pay—behind the workers in oil, construction, printing, automobile, bituminous coal and metal-mining industries. Yet, in 1939 only three classes of workers outranked him, autos, oil and printing. And in the early twenties, my guess would be that the average railroader was tops in pay, although the statistical records back that far are not sufficiently complete to warrant a sweeping conclusion.

RAILROAD securities have likewise suffered. But the investor and speculator can sell out. That accounts for the 69 percent decline in railroad common stocks since 1929 in contrast with the drop of only 6 percent in industrial shares. But a job, a calling, is not like a stock certificate—to be disposed of by telephoning your broker. The switchman, or brakeman, or conductor is trapped in his job, even as you and I.

A psychiatrist might suggest that the railroad worker, frustrated by economic forces beyond his control, is hitting out blindly. Union leaders demand higher wages, but railroad executives balk. Then presidential emergency boards, studying the financial plight of the railroads, refuse to go along with full union demands.

Then the worker, seeing how other groups have gained, is resentful. He feels, perhaps, that his leaders are ineffectual. Try to tell a yardman that he ought to get only 45 hours pay for 40 hours when another presidential emergency board granted the nonoperating unions 48 hours pay for a 40-hour week, when 40 hours and even less constitute the usual work week throughout the country.

THEREFORE, W. P. Kennedy, head of the Trainmen, and R. O. Hughes, head of the Conductors, themselves frustrated, call a strike. They know that the Government will take the railroads over, that their men, like artificial soldiers, will work.

Yet, there may be method in this Gilbert and Sullivan madness. Perhaps through constant seizure, the unions hope to turn fiction into fact and have the Government take the railroads over permanently. Thereby railroad workers might regain economic caste. If revenues from freight and passenger traffic don't warrant upward pay adjustments, perhaps the Government will provide the difference out of tax receipts. Hasn't that happened in New York and Boston, once city governments took over the subway and elevated railroads?

Perhaps, therefore, it isn't enough to say that recent labor-management ructions have caused the breakdown of the Railway Labor Act. It's more to the point to say that the decline in railroad economics caused the ructions.

Prince Georges Police Ask Higher Pay

The Prince Georges County Commissioners yesterday took under consideration a plea by county police for pay increases larger than those recommended two weeks ago by a special committee on reorganization of the force.

Strongest complaints were registered by privates who, under the proposed pay scale, would advance from $2670 to a range from $2700 to $3000.

Police Superintendent Ralph W. Brown, who served on the special committee, and 17 policemen attended yesterday's meeting.

After hearing the policemen contend that the proposed scales were not satisfactory, Commissioner T. Hammond Welsh suggested that county heads restudy them with a view to further salary increases.

Welsh also stated that the lowest pay scales—for privates—should begin at not less than $3000. He recommended a top for privates of $3600.

Other scales proposed by the committee were corporals, $3100 to $3400; sergeants, $3500 to $3800; lieutenants, $3900 to $4400, and the superintendent, $4500 to $4800.

Some policemen contend the scale proposed by the committee would create inequities by raising some officers more than others. They asked for a flat across-the-board increase.

County Attorney Jerrold V. Powers pointed out that the $120 raises now given every four years provide no incentive to work nor any reward for good work. He favored establishing a scale system with advances based on merit rather than seniority.

In another action, the commissioners set September 20 for a rehearing of an application for commercial zoning of a 15-acre tract on Marlboro pike near Hillside. A request for special exception to zoning regulations to permit operation of a drive-in theater on the tract will be heard.

The application, made by Stanley B. Frosh and Charles McKay, was originally heard on July 19. Decision was deferred for three weeks before the commissioners finally disapproved the request.

RCA Advances TV, Radio Prices

Camden, N. J., Aug. 29 (AP).—RCA-Victor division of Radio Corp. of America said today that it has increased prices on most items in the company's television and radio line.

An RCA-Victor division spokesman said the increases effective Monday are approximately 8 percent on television and apply to all models. Radio price increases are approximately 7½ percent, and apply to table models selling at less than $40, and all consoles and radio-phonograph combinations. Portable and battery-operated radios and 45 rpm record changers are not increased, the spokesman said.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, Aug. 29 (AP).—Demand for wheat speeded up on the Board of Trade today and the train turned in its strongest one-day performance in several weeks.

The rest of the market was pretty firm, too, but wheat easily took over market leadership. It was the second straight day the bread cereal has made a solid advance. Perhaps significantly, the rain lifted wheat out of the narrow trading range in which it has puttered for several weeks.

Wheat closed 1¾@3¼ higher, corn ⅛@¾ higher, oats 1 @ 1⅜ higher, rye 2@2½ higher, soybeans 4¼@5 cents higher and lard unchanged to 7 cents a hundred pounds higher.

When an Hour means Forever!

Well, here you are—your hand on the beautiful steering wheel, the tip of your toe on the sensitive throttle, your thoughts on your favorite highway.

You're going to find out—for yourself—whether all these wonderful things you've been hearing are true.

A flick of the finger, and the great Hydra-Matic Drive is set for action. A touch to the throttle, and the power of the dynamic engine goes to the rear wheels. Softly, quietly—and, oh, so smoothly—you roll out into the street.

What's this? A "Stop" sign! You take your toe off the throttle and put it on the brake—and you settle down to the softest, most reassuring stop you ever experienced in all your life. Say, it's fun even to put on the brakes!

You look to the right and you look to the left. The crossing is clear—and you touch the throttle.

You can tell you're going places—for the back of the seat comes up to press against your shoulders. But it's all so easy! From settled stop to driving speed is one continuous sweep—as if by automatic propulsion. What an experience!

Again and again, the big brakes bring you to a velvet stop. Again and again, the great engine sweeps you into action with one continuous movement. Again and again, a rough stretch of road rolls under the wheels and leaves you wondering what happened to it.

Yes, it's true! This wonderful car's performance is equal to its prestige. You want it as much for what it does—as for the magic name it bears.

Come in and see for yourself. But it's only fair to warn you: Sit for an hour at its beautiful wheel, and you'll want this car forever!

Absurd Plot Hides Some Great Voices

By Richard L. Coe

FOR A MOVIE with some of Italy's greatest singers, the Dupont's "Mad About Opera" is a surprising fiasco.

This dreary import makes the same mistake for which foreigners, especially music-conscious Italians, criticize Hollywood musicals. Not only do you get buckets of an absurd plot; you also are forced to watch what passes for camera action while the high-type songsters are going through their classical paces.

The result is, you get very little music and what there is of it is not especially well recorded.

Though the setting is London, the picture was made in Rome from a script evidently manufactured as the cameras churned. The story tells of a pompous little newspaperman of London's Italian colony who wants to impress his girl friend's uncle by putting on an all-star concert to rebuild a blitzed church. Only by going into unending detail could I convey to you the galling absurdities of this plot.

On paper the music looks better than it sounds. You get an especially pleasant folk song from Tito Gobbi, "Dicitencello Vuie," a Neapolitan ballad. He also sings mino Gigli sings "M'appari" from from "Anrdea Chenier." Tito Schipa does the "Barber of Seville" serenade and Gino Bechi is splendid in the "Barber" cavatina. Maria Caniglia sings Rosa Ponselle's own "Casta Diva" from "Norma."

In all the music sequences the camera strays over the faces of listeners or else roams around in the plot. The trick is especially irritating in the "Norma" excerpt, of which you get but a few snatches. That this will be the director's approach is made clear in the very beginning, when Manning and Santoliquido play a Liszt two-piano arrangement of Paganini's "La Campanella."

In short, it is astonishing that Italians should so misuse both their own artists and their own music.

ARENA STAGE announces that "She Stoops to Conquer" will hold over for a third week, to run through September 9. . . . This seems to clinch the success of the new acting group's first production. . . .There's a matinee today—and Saturday—by the way.

VISITORS: "Miss Hot Tea for Two" and "Miss Ice Tea for Two" arrive tomorrow for a gander at the town. . . . The first is Camille Williams, the second Ann Zika, and both are in the cast of "Tea for Two," which opens tomorrow at the Warner. . . . They'll give natch, a tea party at the Mayflower and also promise to tea dance. . . . Crossing these teas is the "Tea Bureau, which has arranged the gals' tour from Chicago to points east and which vows that people nowadays are drinking more tea. . . . Could that have something to do with the price of coffee?

SPEAKING OF COFFEE, it's coffee magnate Tom Stapleton who'll be marrying vaudeville's most popular comedienne, Sibyl Bowan, on Saturday, September 16, at Fifth Avenue's St. Patrick's Cathedral. . . . It can't be Tom's coffee that lures Sib; she drinks a massive milkshake after each of her lively performances.

GILBERT MILLER, suave, worldly and courtly, is probably the most dignified of the regulars on the trans-Atlantic runs; he virtually shuttles in state between his theater in 43d st. and his London headquarters, the lovely St. James. . . . Te went over specially for the ANTA-sponsored "Ballet Theater" opening in Covent Garden Monday night. . . . Wired back the elegant ever literate Mr. Miller: "Ballet a wow."

DALE PARKHILL has been assistant stage manager this sumer at Olney and has been sweating out a chance for a part . . . He got one for "Post Road" next week . . . Monday morning Dale had the wrong kind of tummy pains, was rushed to the hospital by that most matronly of managers, Richard Skinner . . . Yup, it was appendicitis, but he's already out of Montgomery General and the doc says, "Sure, he can ac. next week; nowadays that operation is a quickie."

MOON-MAD: John Archer in his exploring costume for "Destination Moon," holding over on the Trans-Lux screen

FRANK BOUCHER, the Kogod-Burka theater man, will be having a big-style birthday party September 16 . . . His Variety Club and about-town friends are planning a posh celebration for him that night on the Shorenam Terrace and he'll not even have to tell his age . . . The boys just want to give him a party for a change.

Peso Is Devalued 33 to 36 Percent By Argentina

Buenos Aires, Aug. 29 (U.P.)—Argentina has announced a revision of its complicated exchange rates which effectively devalued the peso 33 to 36 percent with respect to the United States dollar.

The "basic peso" used in some foreign trade dealings was reduced in value from 29.76 to 20 United States cents. The "free peso," which stood at a fraction more than 11 cents yesterday, dropped to 7 cents in today's foreign exchange trading.

A single preferential rate, valuing the peso at 13 1-3 cents, was established by the change. Previously, there were two "preferential pesos."

Finance Minister Alfred Gomez Morales said the new measures were ordered to streamline the Argentine exchange system and increase imports and exports.

Tony, Jr., Arrives

Hollywood, Aug. 29 (U.P.)—Singer Tony Martin today announced the birth of a son to his wife, Actress Cyd Charisse.

The boy, named Tony, jr., was born last night in St. John's Hospital in Santa Monica. Miss Charisse has another child, Nicky, 8, by a previous marriage.

Nats Pull Tigers Down Into Virtual Tie With Yanks

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

FOR A FELLOW on a special diet for a jumping digestive tract, and his team's league lead reduced to a skimpy two percentage points, Robert "The Red" Rolfe was a lesson in composure yesterday.

Sure, he was under pressure, the Tigers' manager confessed, with the Yankees, Indians and Red Sox charging on him, "but this so-called strain of setting the pace is over-rated."

Povich

Rolfe's Tigers have been leading the league since June 10, but he hasn't found that at all discomforting. "When I was with the Yankees, they always used to ask Joe McCarthy about the strain of setting the pace, and Joe always had an answer for it.

"'I love it,' McCarthy would always say. 'What's wrong with being on top. Every other club in the league would like to swap places with us and take a chance on breaking down under the strain of setting the pace'."

If he didn't think the Tigers would win the pennant, he would, indeed, be worried, Rolfe was saying. "We're in the best spot. It will be our own fault if we don't win it. And nobody is going to win it for us. That's something we'll have to do for ourselves."

ROLFE WAS reluctant to rate the challengers in any order, but he did betray some concern about the Cleveland Indians. "We have seven games left with Cleveland, and we'll have to face all those good pitchers. Those seven games will decide a whole lot about who winds up on top."

On the opposite side of the Tigers' dressing room, Pitcher Freddie Hutchinson was more explicit. "It looks as if we'll have to wind up beating out the Indians and Yankees. I'm not worried about those Red Sox. They have too many pitchers like me," he said modestly.

Hutchinson was recalling that a year ago the Tigers were in the same position as the 1950 Red Sox. "Too many games behind in the lost column, and then we lose a couple more and are out of it. That's what could happen to Boston, too."

There was one more thing, Hutchinson was saying. "Boston has a half dozen more games with the Yankees, and the Yankees always rack the Red Sox up pretty good. So we can count on that, too."

ROLFE'S CHIEF AIDE, Dick Bartell, as usual was fulminating about the umpires, in explanation of the Tigers' dismal 3-5 record on their current Eastern trip. "They're still murdering us. Up in Boston, Dizzy Trout has Stephens struck out on a pitch down the gut and they call it ball three. Stephens doubles and we lose. Up in Philadelphia, we got the works, too."

Rolfe was pretending not to hear Bartell's squawks. He isn't the man to cuss the umpiring for publication. "The situation ought to get better for us when we get home. Wertz and Evers and Groth haven't been hitting," he pointed out. "But they could perk up in Briggs Stadium when they get a whiff of that friendly crowd."

It helps, Rolfe was saying, to be playing in your own park. "A player responds and gives it that something extra when he knows the crowd is with him. We won a lot of games on the road earlier in the season, but we were hot then. We aren't hot now. That's when a home crowd can give a club a lift. I've seen it happen."

A STOCKY, DARK-BROWED fellow who was pulling on his pants and overhearing the palaver about the Indians, Yankees and Red Sox, volunteered, "we'll take it all, if we can beat the Yankees. They'll fight us harder than anybody."

When the reporter looked up, he recognized Charley Keller, the former Yankee. What Keller was saying came naturally for an old Yankee. "The Yankees always win more games they don't have any right to win," Keller was saying. "They battle you right down to the wire. The club I don't want pushing us is the Yanks. You never know when you have 'em licked."

On the rub-down table, Dizzy Trout was getting his pregame going over from Trainer Jack Hormel. The Tigers' top pitcher lay with his head sidewise, one ear pinned to the table. "Now if Trout wasn't such a big bum who doesn't like the tough going, we'd breeze into the pennant," said Hormel loudly. That crack didn't take as much courage as it appeared. The trainer had made certain he was talking into Dizzy's stone-deaf right ear. And anyway, he didn't mean a word he said.

Tigers Lose Evers, Too, With Sprain

The Tigers' defeat by the Nats last night was their second setback of the day. They are wondering how long they will be without the services of Hoot Evers, their top-hitting outfielder.

Evers lightly dismissed a bruised wrist he suffered earlier in the day when he banged into the felt field wall while chasing a ball during batting practice. He suited up for last night's game, but was unable to play, so great was the pain. The injured member is the right wrist of Evers' throwing arm. Worried Detroit officials have ordered X-rays today. Doctors have tabbed the injury as a severe sprain, with only a remote possibility of fracture.

McMillin Tells Texans Lions Not Rolling Over for Redskins

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

Dallas, Tex. Aug. 29.—Texas formally welcomed the Washington Redskins and Detroit Lions to Dallas today, but, as usual, Texas gave itself the best of it.

The two squads, who number 13 former Texas college players between them, were guests of 1,000 fans at a Salesmanship Club luncheon, arranged to whoop it up for the Lions-Redskins exhibition game in the Cotton Bowl stadium tomorrow night.

If the non-Texas players on the two teams weren't made to feel they had been wronged by not being born in Texas, it was not intentional.

Toastmaster Morris Frank, a professional Lone Star Stater from Houston, hauled out every adjective in the book to describe the greatness of Texans generally and Texas-bred football players particularly.

Every now and then the conversation got around to tomorrow night's football game, which starts at 10 p. m., Washington time.

Bo McMillin, Texas-born coach of underdog Lions, took advantage of one of the rare non-praise-for-Texas-moments, to warn the unbeaten Redskins "that their three-game exhibition streak would be ended."

"We didn't come down here to add to the glory of the Redskins. They have enough already," McMillin promised. McMillin's Lions, 14-point underdogs, have been beaten by the Pittsburgh Steelers and Cleveland Browns while the Redskins

Truman Sees Hudson Best Trout, 5-4, On 6-Hitter

By Shirley Povich
Post Reporter

President and Mrs. Truman made an unprogrammed visit to Griffith Stadium last night and then Sid Hudson and the Nats compounded the surprises. They beat the league-leading Tigers, 5-4, to make the pennant race more hectic.

The Tigers, desperate to match the Yankee victory earlier in the day, ran into a solid snag in Hudson who shut them out after the fifth inning to win his battle with Dizzy Trout, Detroit's top pitcher.

The pesky, fifth-place Nats thus enabled the Yankees to prune to a mere .002 percentage points the league lead held by the Tigers who now are operating on their slimmest margin since they went to the top June 10.

First Win Here

Hudson was also enabling the President to sit in on history of a mild sort. It was the first time this season, in eight attempts, that the Nats beat Detroit in Griffith Stadium.

The figures show the manner in which their challengers are now crowding the fading Tigers for first place:

	W.	L.	Pct.	G.B.
Detroit	76	45	.628	..
New York	77	46	.626	..
Cleveland	76	49	.608	2
Boston	76	49	.608	2

The Tigers gave Trout leads of 2-0 and 4-3 in the early innings, but Hudson out-pitched him over the full route and turned in a six-hit performance. Pat Mullin, who drew a walk, was the only Tiger base runner after the fifth.

Coan Streak Ends

Trout was whacked for 12 hits by the Nats, with Gil Coan's 14-game hitting streak the lone Washington casualty. Curiously enough, Coan, alone among the Nats, went hitless for the night.

The Nats busted loose against Trout in two big innings, the fourth and fifth, to win the ball game, Mickey Grasso whacked an important two-run single to wipe out the Tigers' 2-0 lead in the fourth, and in the fifth Irv Noren and Mickey Vernon made most of the trouble for Trout.

Substituted Outfielder Pat Mullin, a late starter in the Tigers' lineup after Hoot Evers came down with a wrist injury, made a brave attempt to win the ball game for Trout with a two-run homer in the fifth. He reclaimed the lead for the Tigers, 4-3, at that point, but the Nats bounced back smartly.

Detroit assembled a 2-0 lead for Trout in the first three innings, getting a run in the first on a wild throw by Dente after Lipon opened up with a single and Priddy walked. In the third, they put hits by Bob Swift and Gerry Priddy together for another run.

Nats Get Tough

All of a sudden in the fourth, though, the Nats got tough with Trout and came up with four consecutive singles to wrest the lead from the Tigers, 3-2. Mele, Michaels and Dente whacked him for hits for the first run, and then Grasso banged a solid two-run single into left.

Hudson was apparently in no serious trouble in the fifth after Lipon singled with one out. Priddy flied to Mele for the second out, and then Hudson's 3-2 lead vanished. Mullin drilled one of his pitches high over the right-field wall for his homer.

That was the last hit the Tigers ever did get, though. Hudson shepherded the Nats through the rest of the game as if he were trying to pitch 'em into the league lead.

IN SHORT . . . The rained-out afternoon game of the program was no great financial loss. Only 4000 were in the stands . . . The White House box was crawling with Presidents last night.

Sitting with President Truman were American League President will Harridge and Nats' President Clark Griffith . . . When Eddie Yost drew a walk in the third inning, it was his 102d of the season, tying the all-time record for a Washington player, set by Buddy Myer in 1934 . . .

N. Y. Wins, 6-5, Leads, 4-0, as Rain Halts Second

New York, Aug. 29.—Hank Bauer singled with the bases loaded and two outs in the tenth inning to give the New York Yankees a 6-5 victory over the sagging Cleveland Indians in the first game of a doubleheader here today.

The victory moved New York into a virtual tie for first place with Detroit, which lost to Washington,

Harridge Backs Ump, Rejects Yank Protest

Will Harridge, president of the American League, last night refused to honor a protest of the New York Yankees against the calling of the second game of their doubleheader with the Cleveland Indians.

Harridge said: "The game is dead and will have to be replayed. The American League relies on the judgment of its umpires in such cases." Harridge was here attending the Washington-Detroit game at Griffith Stadium.

5-4, but the Yankees trail the Tigers by 2 percentage points.

Senior Umpire Bill Summers called off the nightcap because of rain with the Yanks leading, 4-0, in the third inning.

Yankee General Manager George Weiss announced afterward that he is officially protesting Summers' decision to League President Will Harridge. "The field was playable," declared Weiss. "There was no excuse for calling the game."

Bauer's hit in the tenth climaxed an uphill Yankee fight to overcome a 5-3 Cleveland lead. Yogi Berra slammed out a two-run homer in the eighth to tie the score and send the game into extra innings.

With one out in the Yankee tenth and Early Wynn pitching for Cleveland, Indians' second baseman Joe Gordon fumbled Phil Rizzuto's grounder. Berra singled and Joe DiMaggio was passed intentionally to load the bases.

Bob Lemon replaced Wynn, and retired Pinch-hitter Tommy Henrich on a pop fly, but Bauer sliced a single down the leftfield line to score Rizzuto with the winning run.

Vic Homers, Wins 17th

Vic Raschi pitched all the way for New York and posted his seventeenth victory against eight losses. Earlier Raschi slammed a three-run homer to stake himself to a 3-1 lead. The Indians hacked away, however, with two runs in the sixth to tie it and two more in the seventh to pull in front.

The Indians lost their double play combination of Roberto Avila and Ray Boone. Avila twisted his ankle in the seventh inning of the first game, and Boone sprained his back in the collision with New York's Billy Johnson in a play at second base during the second inning of the nightcap.

Jim Konstanty Helps Roberts Win 18th, 5-3

St. Louis, Aug. 29 (AP).—Robin Roberts hurled beautiful four-hit ball for eight innings, but Jim Konstanty had to stop a ninth-inning St. Louis Cardinal rally to give the Philadelphia Phillies a 5-to-3 victory tonight. The triumph kept the Phils five and a half games ahead of the second-place Brooklyn Dodgers.

The Cardinals came up with two hits and two runs in the ninth to knock Roberts out but he gained his eighteenth triumph of the year.

Stan Musial had the chief success against Roberts with three of the six hits—his double in the fourth frame leading to the first St. Louis run. He took third on a wild pitch and scored on Bill Howert's long liner.

Newcombe Sets Down Cubs, 8-2, Pulls Dodgers Out of Spin

Chicago, Aug. 29 (AP).—Don Newcombe, who has never lost to Chicago registered his fifteenth victory as the Dodgers ended their two-game losing streak by lacing the Cubs, 8-2, before 19,910 fans today.

Scoring five runs in the fifth for their biggest inning in a month, or since they last played the Cubs, the Brooks ended the six-game win streak of Frank Hiller, who suffered his third defeat against 10 wins.

Carl Furillo hit his fifteenth homer off Reliefer Doyle Lade in the eighth inning. Jackie Robinson snapped his slump with two hits to drive in three runs. Duke Snider stretched his hit streak to 16 games.

Doerr Leads 15-Hit Assault With 2 Homers; Parnell Wins

Boston, Aug. 29 (AP).—Boston's blazing Red Sox pounded three pitchers for 15 hits, including a pair of homers by veteran Bobby Doerr, today to overwhelm the Chicago White Sox, 13-6.

But Clyde Vollmer's two-run four-bagger rated as the game's most lusty blow, for it came in the first inning after Lefty Mel Parnell had been greeted by a three-run Chicago blasting.

Parnell started in wobbly fashion for his thirteenth win. He loaded the bases with one out in the opening session before Gus Zernial crashed a three-run double.

Newcomer Holds Edge 1-6, 6-3, 7-6

Forest Hills, N. Y., Aug. 29 (AP).—A torrential rainstorm washed out the National Tennis championships today just as Althea Gibson, a New York City Negro girl, appeared on the brink of producing one of the greatest upsets in the event's long history.

Miss Gibson, first of her race ever to play in the tournament, led Louise Brough of Beverly Hills, present Wimbledon champion, 7—6, in the third and deciding set of their second round match when the rains came. Fifteen hundred fans who had been sitting tense on the grandstand court were drenched before they could reach cover.

Miss Brough, 27, and a former National champion, appeared on the way to an easy victory when she won the first set 6—1 from her nervous opponent. But Althea fought back from a 2—3 deficit to capture the second set 6—3 and then rallied from 1—4 to deuce the third and carry it into overtime.

The match will be continued tomorrow from where it was interrupted, with Miss Brough starting to serve in the fourteenth game.

Up to the time of the downpour, no other upsets had occurred during the second day of play. The rain ceased after some 15 minutes, but all the courts were covered with pools of water.

Herbie Flam of Beverly Hills, top-seeded American in the men's division, advanced to the third round by defeating Philippe Washer of Belgium, 6—1, 6—4, 6—8, 6—4.

Only the upper half of the men's draw was played today. Elam exerted himself little under the hot sun and made no great effort to win the third set.

Lions Not Rolling Over have knocked off the Los Angeles Rams, San Francisco '49ers and Chicago Cardinals.

To emphasize his point, McMillin introduced Quarterback Bobby Layne, Halfback Doak Walker, End Leon Hart and Center Joe Watson as "just a few of the boys the Redskins will have to stop if they think they're going to beat us tomorrow night."

Sammy Baugh, whom many Texans will be seenig for the first time, got a rousing welcome, but the acclaim for the 1936 Texas Christian University star was second to that of Doak Walker, the 1950 Southern Methodist University star.

President George Marshall of the Redskins, was chided by both McMillin and Toastmaster Frank.

"From the record the Redskins have made so far, I suspect Marshall has stopped being an advisory coach," McMillin said.

Morris, answering a statement Marshall had made in which he said he was the first to bring professional football in Texas, back in 1938, said.

"Marshall didn't bring professional football to Texas. S. M. U. had it way before George thought about it."

Colts Battle To End Losses At 3 in Row

By Jack Walsh
Post Reporter

Baltimore, Aug. 29.—Something has to give at Memorial Stadium tomorrow night and the Baltimore Colts are going to do what they can to see that it's the San Francisco Forty-Niners.

The two former AAC clubs meet in a National Football League exhibition and can't boast a victory between them in five previous starts. Kickoff is set for 8:30 p. m.

The Colts have the longest losing streak—three—but the West Coast team has taken sounder drubbings. Last Sunday the champion Philadelphia Eagles trounced them, 28-10, after the Washington Redskins had posted a 31-12 triumph.

That Redskin rout makes the game particularly interesting in this area. It will form some sort of a comparison for the fans to make for the league opener in Baltimore September 17 when the Colts entertain the Redskins.

Baltimore, which is trying mightily in its tough exhibition schedule, easily could be 2-1 instead of winless. Long runs by Bobby Gage and a last-minute field goal by Joe Geri gave the Pittsburgh Steelers a 30-27 win.

Last week, after a 70-yard run to the end zone with an intercepted pass by Herb Rich was nullified by a personal foul, the Chicago Bears squeezed by, 21-17. Cleveland Browns pasted Baltimore, 34-7, and the Colts have no alibi for that one.

Principal Baltimore weakness appears to be its pass defense. The great Frankie Albert will be exploiting it tomorrow night with his left-handed tosses. Washington's Sammy Baugh and the Eagles' Tommy Thompson have outperformed Albert in the 49ers' last two games. Chances are he will want to get even.

Baltimore's Clem Crowe and San Francisco's Buck Shaw, coaching rivals, were Notre Dame teammates for a brief spell in the early '20s.

Primo Carnera Wrestles Meeker Here Tonight

Primo Carnera, former heavyweight boxing champion of the world, meets Roland Meeker, Shreveport, La., in a one-hour wrestling match at Turner's Arena tonight.

Sharing honors with the Carnera-Meeker match is a 60-minute women's bout between 21-year-old Nell Stewart, the "Betty Grable of wrestling," and Jean Holland of Covington, Ky.

Three other 30-minute bouts are on the card. Ken Ackles meets Ted Courtas; Angelo Savoldi meets Les Ruffin, and Jim Beaton meets Jack Dillon.

Worsham Favored
Junior Open Golf Draws 144 Today

The last minute entry of Marv Worsham, younger brother of 1947 Nation Open Champ Lew Worsham, in the District Open Junior Golf tournament starting at Georgetown Prep today, brought a new favorite to the record field of 144.

Worsham, 20-year-old junior at Wake Forest, is one of the Nation's topnotch collegiate golfers. He won the District Junior Open in 1947, and is one of the few golfers ever to win the Washington Post Schoolboy Golf tournament two years running, in 1946-47.

A pack of Wolfes are expected to furnish the chief competition for Worsham. Billy Wolfe, Washington Post Schoolboy champ, and holder of the Middle Atlantic Junior title, Bob Wolfe, medalist at this year's Post Schoolboy tournament, and Ricky Wolfe, a member of Bethesda's championship inter-club team, are entered.

Denny Bolster, ex-Middle Atlantic junior champ, Paul McMahon, Maryland Junior champ, and Perky Cullinane, District Junior champ are entered. Eighteen holes medal play qualifying rounds will be shot today.

Leeper Paces D. C. Victory

Bob Leeper, 1949 Washington amateur featherweight boxing champion, gained revenge over Gene Butler of Baltimore last night as D. C. won an inter-city fight card, 5-2, at Bolling Air Force Base.

Leeper decisioned Butler in the five-round feature. In a prior match between Leeper and Butler, the latter won a decision. Washington won five of the seven fights.

Budget Bill Carries $31,600,000 to Pay Civilians' Overtime

OVERTIME: A total of $31,600,000 is carried in the supplemental budget bill approved by the House to pay overtime to civilian employes in the Army, Navy and Air Force. That's sufficient to place tens of thousands of them on a 6-day, 48-hour work week for the remainder of this fiscal year.

SOCIAL SECURITY: The President has requested funds to add about 300 new employes here to Social Security's staff to carry out the new law. But that's only the beginning. Other requests will be made for several thousand employes to work on the new law. They will be in the Bureau of Old-Age & Survivors Insurance, Treasury and Internal Revenue.

PROMOTIONS: What's a temporary promotion? That's a very timely question in view of the rider approved by the House to make all grade promotions temporary to classified employes after September 1.

Some employes have jumped to the conclusion that they would lose their regular civil service status if they accepted temporary promotions under the House plan. They wouldn't. Others argue there isn't such a thing as a temporary promotion. They are wrong, too.

The House rider is aimed at discouraging grade promotions in Government and that it would most certainly do. It appears to have been drawn on the highly questionable assumption that the present crisis is a temporary affair that will end shortly and that most grade promotions given should be canceled when it's over.

The more officials study the rider which was carried here in full on Monday the more convinced they become it must be defeated in the Senate.

ANNUAL LEAVE: Many Federal workers have the mistaken impression that the Congress has voted to cancel part of their accumulated annual leave. This is exactly what has happened:

Senate-House conferees on the omnibus appropriation bill agreed to a rider to require all Federal employes to take leave earned during this calendar year of 1950 by June 30, 1951, or else forfeit any unused part. Employes who enter the armed forces are exempt as agencies plan to pay them in full for their accumulated leave.

The rider has no effect whatsoever on annual leave accumulated prior to this year. It covers the 26 days a classified employe, for example, will earn this calendar year.

The Congress approved the rider under the mistaken impression that it was cracking down on annual leave. The amendment will prove to be beneficial to thousands of employes who would otherwise lose leave on December 31. For example:

If an employe carried over the 60-day maximum from last year and is unable to take any of the 26 days he earns this year, he would lose all leave earned this year on December 31. But the rider allows him to carry it over to next June 30.

ECA: The President's blanketing-in order will benefit many employes in the Economic Cooperation Administration. Scores of non-status employes in classified ECA jobs had temporary indefinite appointments. The order makes them eligible for full Civil Service status, provided they have at least two years of service and meet other conditions. The order doesn't cover employes in Central Intelligence Agency. All CIA jobs are outside Civil Service.

JOBS: Civil Service is accepting applications for several different types of phone jobs in the Rural Electrification Administration. The jobs pay from $3825 to $6400 annually to start.

HEALTH PROGRAM: The Budget Bureau has informed Federal agencies that it will consider a health program for each Federal agency based on a cost of $8 per employe per year.

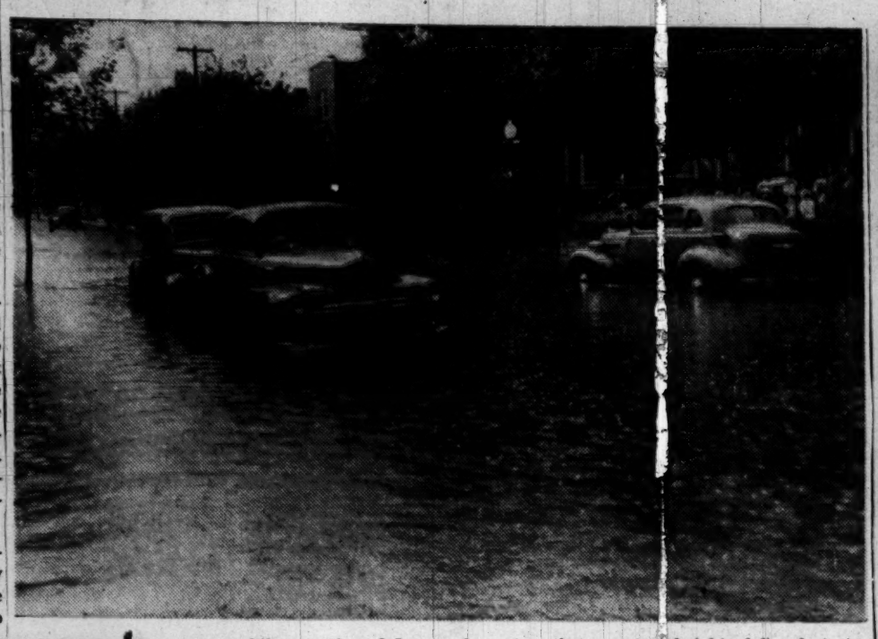
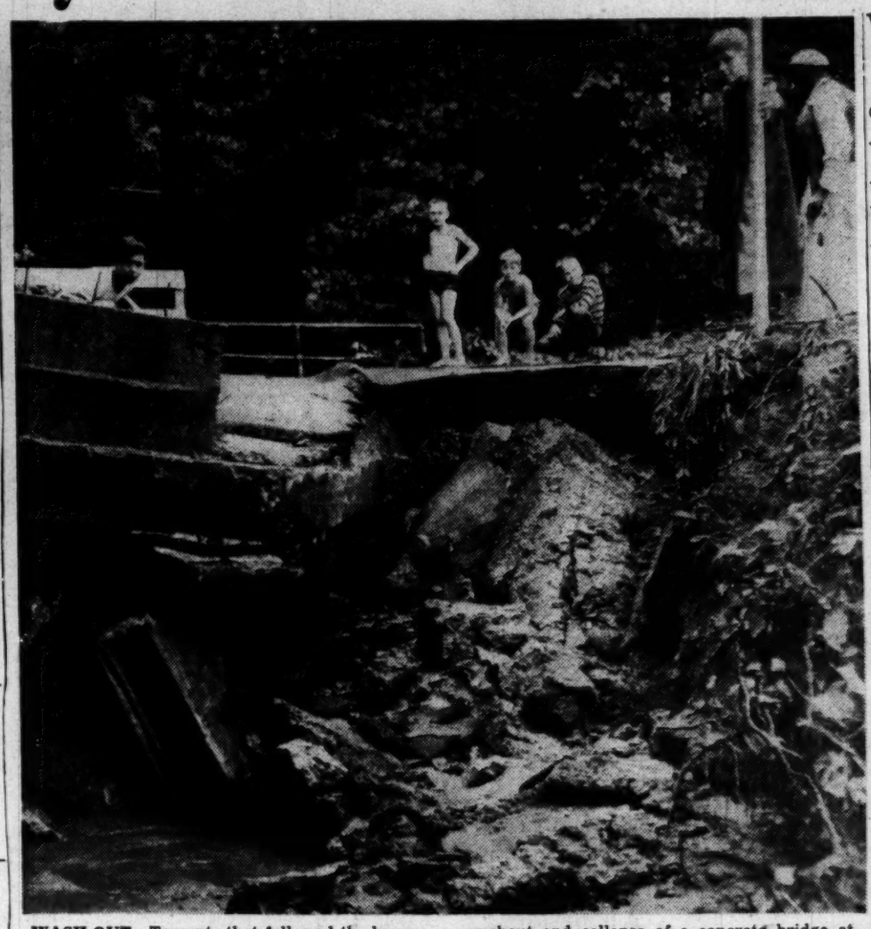
Flash Floods Hit City Third Time in 10 Days



STALLED—These automobiles at 5th and Ingraham sts. nw. were stalled and nearly covered by waters that rose to a height of five feet at the crest of the flood



WASH OUT—Torrents that followed the heavy rain of yesterday's thunderstorm caused this washout and collapse of a concrete bridge at Maple and Sherman aves. in Takoma Park, Md.

Water Hits 5-Ft. Level In Several D. C. Sectors

Storm Damages Many Homes, Cars And Shops; Public Transport Disrupted

By Dorothea Andrews
Post Reporter

For the third time in 10 days, flash floods inundated sections of Greater Washington yesterday, marooning cars and people, washing out roadways and flooding cellars.

In some areas, the rains flooded to five-foot depths, but the Weather Bureau reported only a "trace" of rain at its National Airport station.

Hardest hit sectors were Sheridan st. nw. from the area of Third st. to 16th st. and Fifth and Ingraham sts. nw.

The Prince Georges County police radio KGA240 at Hyattsville was knocked out by the storm, and all police calls for the northern sector of the county had to be telephoned up from the Marlboro station, where the radio remained in service.

Bridge Washed Out

In Takoma Park, a bridge over a road at Sherman and Maple aves. was washed out and traffic was blocked.

The Weather Bureau said the storm area was about 10 miles in diameter, and lasted for about an hour. By 5:30 p. m., the storm was reported as 25 miles east of Washington and still traveling.

At 5th and Ingraham sts. nw., water flowed down from higher ground and spread to flood depths along Ingraham between 3d an 5th sts.

Seven cars were caught in the rising flood waters, among them a scout car from the Sixth Precinct Station. Police Pvts. H. J. Schoude and C. R. Mothershead had to rescue an elderly woman from a Bell Cab trapped there by the flood, and carry her to higher ground in water at least 5 feet deep.

Cars Abandoned

As the waters rose, cars were abandoned, and soon were bowled along in the street. The waters, which rose at about 3:15, did not recede for about an hour.

At 3d and Sheridan sts. nw., high waters came down from the athletic field of the Calvin Coolidge High School and flooded the street, trapping one automobile there. Stores on nearby 3d st. were flooded and customers had to leave one store as the water rushed in. Proprietors in several stores along the street reported merchandise stored in cellars including drugs and perishables, was "floating around downstairs." Firemen turned off gas meters in the area to avoid danger of an explosion.

The Washington Gas Light Co. reported it had received several calls from persons whose cellars had been flooded, extinguishing pilot lights.

Capital Transit reported delays on four north Washington routes because of the storm. E. C. Giddings, vice president, said that Military rd. and Beach dr. in Rock Creek Park were flooded. The Military rd. M-2 line couldn't detour around the flooded area and was delayed for about 30 minutes.

At Georgia ave. and W sts. nw., a service pit for streetcars was flooded, causing more delay.

The J-6 Takoma line had to detour around 5th and Ingraham sts. for 30 minutes because of flooded conditions there.

The Potomac Elictric Power Co. reported 12 wires down during the storm, but not in any specific area. There was no general power failure, although there was a cable failure at 16th and Webster sts. nw., which put that area without lights for about an hour. Pepco officials received about 100 individual complaints that current was out while the rain fell.

The Sixth Precinct reported its

Ecuadorian Visitor Raped in Woods; Bloodhounds Try To Pick Up Trail

Trained bloodhounds were nosing through woods and underbrush in Arlington last night, trying to pick up the trail of a nude man who brutally raped a 23-year-old Ecuadorian beauty.

The pretty brunette victim, in this country only three months, was admitted to Arlington Hospital where Dr. William Dolan announced after an examination that she had been raped.

Although she was hysterical and babbled incoherently in Spanish and English, Arlington police were able to piece together this meager description of the rapist: A Negro, completely nude, and "large and fat."

The girl, who lives with an aunt in the 2800 block of S. Buchanan st., Arlington, suffered bruises and lacerations and a possible fractured nose. Her condition is not serious, the hospital said.

May Be Peeping Tom

It was believed her attacker may be the same naked man who terrorized housewives in the Pickett Homes Development in Arlington between midnight Monday and 2 a. m. yesterday by peeping in windows.

The attack on the Ecuadorian girl occurred at about 4 p. m. in a heavily wooded area between North Fairlington and the Shirlington Shopping Center.

According to police, many residents of this section of North Fairlington use a shortcut path through the woods to go to the shopping center.

Arlington Detective Chief C. Burns Pressley said the girl was thrown to the ground and raped as she returned from the shopping center with a paper sack full of groceries.

Pressley said she had been beaten and there were marks around her throat indicating she had been choked.

Clothes Torn Off

He said most of her clothes had been ripped off and a small pool of blood was found near the scene of the attack.

The girl—who a neighborhood girl friend says plans to enter Stephens College in Missouri next month—was first seen after the attack by three 9-year-old boys as she emerged from the woods in the rear of the 4600 block of S. 31st rd.

The boys told police that when they first saw her running from the woods they thought she was wearing a red dress. As she got closer, they said, they observed that the "red dress" was blood which covered her body and the shreds of clothing which she clutched to her.

The boys led the hysterical girl to the home of Miss Isabelle Greene, at 4611 S 31st rd., where neighbors administered first aid before the arrival of an ambulance.

Police immediately launched a manhunt throughout the area and within 40 minutes had jailed a 40-year-old suspect—6 feet tall and weighing 205 pounds—who was picked up on a construction job in the 4000 block of Four Mile Run dr.

The suspect was booked on a charge of felonious assault. One policeman admitted he was a suspect in the attack on the girl.

Truman Gets Bill to Restore Kurusu Daughter's Citizenship

President Truman has before him a bill to restore the American citizenship of Mrs. Jaye Kurusu Maddox, daughter of Saburu Kurusu, one of Japan's envoys here at the time of Pearl Harbor.

The 34-year-old woman was born to her American mother when the Kurusus were stationed in Chicago. She lost her citizenship by voting in the 1946 Japanese election.

Mrs. Maddox is the wife of Lieut. William J. Maddox, jr., to whom she was married in Japan in 1948. But when the officer sought to bring his bride back to the United States with him, the State Department ruled that she had lost her citizenship. Maddox is a liaison pilot now with the 1st Cavalry in Korea.

Lieutenant Maddox's mother, Mrs. Marion Wygant Maddox of 4230 Fessenden st. nw., then sought congressional aid through a private bill to restore her citizenship. The bill was backed by former Ambassador to Japan Joseph C. Grew, who wrote Senator Irving Ives (R., N. Y.) that he had known Jaye Kurusu and her parents intimately. Mrs. Maddox, sr., said that her daughter had voted in the 1946 election under what amounted to duress. The State Department, however, declared there was no evidence of duress.

The Maddoxes were married in Japan in 1948 and have one child.

Civil Defense Cut Reversal Asked by D. C.

District Commissioners asked the Senate Appropriations Committee yesterday to reverse the House action in slashing civil defense funds from $290,000 down to only $30,000.

The commissioners asked for a hearing at which Engineer Commissioner Gordon R. Young will detail plans for using the money and argue that even that much is only a beginning for a real defense program here.

A hearing on the matter, and on other District cuts made by the House, is expected later in the week.

The commissioners are expected to ask for restoration of at least part of the other cuts, notably the complete elimination of $68,500 to repair boilers and other equipment at Upshur st. tuberculosis hospital. Without the repairs, the hospital may have to close when cold weather arrives.

Senator Lister Hill (D., Ala.), a member of the Appropriations group who usually heads a District subcommittee, said yesterday he favors giving the District ample funds for real civil defense.

$3-Million Fund Voted For Baltimore Parkway

A three-million-dollar fund to begin the 13-million-dollar job of completing the Baltimore-Washington Parkway was approved yesterday by both Senate and House and sent to President Truman.

The money was contained in the 1950 Federal highway aid bill, a $1,188,000,000 measure. The District will share in the aid program for 1952 and 1953.

Maryland already is building the dual-lane, divided highway from Baltimore to Jessup rd., a distance of 10 miles. The remaining 18½ miles will be finished by the Federal Government. About two million dollars already has been spent on grading and drainage of six and one half miles, but work has been held up for some time.

Eleven Dogs Crowd Home; Ten Must Go

A Washington postal clerk has exactly one week to get rid of 10 dogs.

She is Mrs. Lulee Jackson, of 817, S. Monroe st., Arlington, Va., who was warned yesterday by the Arlington Commonwealth's attorney that between now and next Tuesday 10 of the 11 dogs now living in her living room must move out.

The order was issued after receipt of a complaint signed by 32 of Mrs. Jackson's neighbors, objecting to the odor they claim the dogs created, to the noise they say is intense, and to the fact the dogs are a "health problem."

Mrs. Jackson, a clerk in the postoffice at 12th and Pennsylvania ave. nw., said yesterday she already has disposed of four pets. She said the dogs stay in the room of her home, while she lives upstairs. She said the living room was damaged by fire two years ago and now has no furniture in it, and that when she is at work, she locks up the dogs.

200 Explorer Scouts To Camp at Bolling

Two hundred Explorer Scouts will be in a three-day encampment at Bolling Air Force Base today, the National Capital Area Council of the Boy Scouts of America announced yesterday.

The Scouts represent 23 different units in the Washington area. They are to be housed at Bolling Air Base and the Naval Receiving Station at Anacostia.

Among activities planned for the encampment are visits to the Base hospital and shops, to Andrews Field to watch P-86 jets take orientation flights and to watch training films.

Milk Import Extension in D. C. Indicated

Fear of Creating Shortage Seen as Reason for Move

By Thomas Winship
Post Reporter

District Commissioners are expected Thursday to extend for another 30 days the war-imposed provision to allow importation of outside milk not screened by District health inspectors.

Fear of creating a local milk shortage in view of unsettled war conditions and the slower-than-expected process of qualifying nearby Maryland and Virginia farms for sale of milk here under the District's revised milk regulations are reportedly the prime reasons for the commissioners' almost certain action.

The ban on outside "emergency" milk is due to go into effect September 1. It was lifted eight years ago when a war-created milk shortage developed. Last July 1 the commissioners granted a 60-day delay on reimposing the ban.

Health Officer Daniel L. Seckinger went before the District heads yesterday morning to urge the 30-day extension of the open market on milk and later told reporters he may recommend an even longer grace period.

Under "Safe" Mark

To close out importation of milk here from outside the Washington milk-shed, Seckinger said, would mean the supply of surplus milk would be below the "safe" mark.

Seckinger set the city's safe surplus level at about 17,600 gallons daily.

That further delay in completely closing the Washington milk market to outside farms is in the wind also was tossed out to reporters by Seckinger.

The health officer made clear inspection of the nearby farms is proceeding at snail's pace.

Officials estimate about 400 nearby dairy farms must meet the revised standards to assure Washington an adequate milk supply under an importation ban.

Chemical Purification

The principal change approved by the commissioners allows the use of milk sterilization by chemicals as well as steam. This issue was the focal point of heated hearings last month at the Capitol and the District Building.

But the new regulations were tightened by placing a ceiling on bacteria count in the milk and by permitting Health officials to check dairy company records to determine if they are buying from sources not inspected by the Health Department.

Preliminary inspections earlier this summer revealed that many farms which chemically sterilize milk and now qualify to ship milk here are below the District standard.

360-Day Drug Cure Ordered

Julius E. Dunn, 23, of Montclair, N. J., was sentenced yesterday by Judge George D. Neilson to serve 360 days in the Federal institution for drug addicts at Lexington, Ky.

Dunn was charged with stealing religious vestments from St. Ann's Rectory, 42d and Yuma sts. nw. on Monday. Police called to the scene chased Dunn for six blocks and were aided by two boy bicyclers who pointed out Dunn's escape route.

In Municipal Court, Judge Neilson was told that Dunn is an epileptic and a heroin addict. The defendant asked to be hospitalized for his condition.

Five-Vehicle Pile-Up Caused By Woman Lying on Highway

Three cars and two trucks piled up on Baltimore blvd. at Dorsey, Md., at 5:45 a. m. yesterday when the driver of one of the trucks was reported to have stopped suddenly to avoid hitting a woman lying on the highway.

The woman, identified as Mrs. Angelina Riley of Baltimore, was jailed on an intoxication charge.

One of the truck drivers, Walter Tobley, 21, of New Freedom, Pa., was critically injured. He was taken to University Hospital in Baltimore with a fractured skull, fractures of both legs and internal injures.

According to Maryland State police, this is what happened:

Roland Ayers, 28, of Norfolk, Va., shuttling an empty truck from Virginia to Baltimore, pulled over the crest of a hill and saw something lying in the outside northbound lane of the dual highway. He jammed on his brakes.

The truck driven by Tobley came over the hill and smashed into the rear of Ayers' truck. A wrecking crew worked for 20 minutes to get Tobley out of the crumpled cab of his truck. Ayers was unhurt.

Immediately after the two-truck crash, two cars stopped and their passengers viewed the wreckage. Suddenly a third car came over the hill and crashed into the rear of the second parked car, which in turn crashed into the first parked car.

Police said none of the occupants of the cars suffered more than scratches.

Howard C. Alfred, 23, of Columbus, Pa., a sailor patient on convalescent leave from the Bethesda Naval Hospital suffered undetermined injuries at about 1:30 p. m. when his car failed to make a turn on Route 240, just north of the hospital, left the highway, snapped off a telephone pole and overturned.

Two passengers riding with Alfred were unhurt. Alfred was taken in an unconscious condition to the Naval Hospital by the Bethesda-Chevy Chase rescue squad.

Mrs. Angelina Petrolo, 21, of Republic, Pa., was killed instantly at 4 p. m. yesterday in a traffic accident on U. S. 40 near the line dividing Howard and Baltimore Counties.

State police said a car driven by Mrs. Petrolo's husband, John, 21, skidded on the wet highway, overturned and was struck by an oncoming truck driven by Harry B. Chapman, 30, of Baltimore. Three other passengers in Petrolo's car were admitted to St. Agnes Hospital in Baltimore, none of them in critical condition.

Technical charges of manslaughter were placed against Petrolo and Chapman.

Commission Gives Up Fight With Banks on Earnings Tax

The District Commissioners threw in the towel yesterday in their running fight with banks here over gross earnings tax rates.

On advice of Corporation Counsel Vernon E. West, the city heads agreed not to appeal a recent ruling by the Board of Tax Appeals that banks should be taxed at 4 percent, rather than 6, and that deductions should be allowed for interest paid depositors.

For the past five years the District has been taxing the banks at the higher rate with no deductions allowed. The lower assessment will be made next year, Tax Assessor Edward A. Dent said yesterday.

By the commissioners' decision, the city now must refund to nine local banks about $600,000.

Lawrence Koenigsberger, sole member of the Board of Tax Appeals, handed down the ruling in favor of the banks on August 17.

The District has reserved funds to pay the banks, but Congress must first authorize the payment by legislation.

North Carolina U. Man To Give Farm Talk Here

Dr. Henry L. Lucas, professor of statistics at the University of North Carolina, will talk on statistics and research on pasture and grazing September 6 from 4 to 5 p. m. in the United States Agriculture Department's Jefferson Auditorium.

The address is sponsored by the Agriculture Research Administration and the Department Committee on Experimental Design.

Morat Promoted to Captaincy In Fire Dept. by Commission

Lieut. Herbert R. Morat, veteran of 26 years in the Fire Department, was promoted yesterday to the rank of captain, effective September 1, by the District Commissioners.

He will succeed Capt. J. R. Ludlam, retired. Morat presently commands No. 16 Engine Company.

The commissioners also promoted three Fire Department privates to sergeant. They are John W. Graziani of Engine Co. 18, Arnold J. Nelson of Engine Co. 25 and Charles M. O'Malley of Truck Co. 4.

At the same time the District heads approved appointment of 17 privates to the Metropolitan police force and agreed to three assignment changes.

Precinct Detective John J. Fitzpatrick was assigned temporarily to the Detective Bureau as a detective sergeant. Probational Detective William C. Rasmusen of the Juvenile Bureau was assigned to temporary duty in a precinct and Pvt. Seymour Raboy, now in the pawn inspector's office, was temporarily assigned as probationary detective.

Streetcar Service Cut Is Ordered

Curtailment of service on the Georgia ave., Friendship and Cabin John streetcar lines and abandonment of the Brightwood division carbarn as an operating base were announced last night by the Capital Transit Company.

E. C. Giddings, CTC vice president, said the Brightwood carbarn at Georgia and Missouri aves. nw., would close September 10 and the minor service curtailment would go into effect the same day.

On September 11 service from the Southwest Mall area on the Georgia ave. line will be discontinued all day on Saturdays and after 7 p. m. weekdays, except for two trips shortly after midnight.

The Senate District Committee approved the nomination of Emory B. Smith as a Municipal Court judge yesterday but a Senate floor fight is in prospect.

The committee vote was 6 to 1 with one Senator voting "present."

The "no" vote came from Senator Olin D. Johnston (D., S. C.) who said he would fight the nomination on the floor. It may come up in a day or so.

Johnston said he felt Smith was too old—he is 64—for a 10-year appointment. He also he felt Smith was not qualified.

Senator Robert C. Hendrickson (R., N. J.) cast the "present" vote. He told reporters he was not certain of Smith's judicial qualifications after making a personal investigation.

Senator Johnston expressed anger when he learned that Chairman Matthew M. Neely (D., W. Va.) had told reporters after the closed meeting that "no negative votes were cast against Smith." There was no explanation of Neely's statement.

Smith would be the thirteenth Municipal Court judge, filling a new post created by Congress

21 Candidates Speak at Rally In Glen Echo

About 150 members of the 3-7 Club crowded Glen Echo Firehouse last night to hear 21 candidates for local, State and Federal offices in the Democratic primary September 18.

Russell P. Hartle, candidate for Congress from the Sixth District, said that, if elected, he would represent the "American interests" rather than those of an individual district. His opponent, W. Prescott Allen, took the opposite view. He said the people needed a candidate who was interested in the district, specifically, one who would push the George Washington pkwy.

Other speakers included Mrs. Stella Werner, candidate for the Montgomery County Council, and Robert Beall and Joseph B. Simpson, jr., candidates for the State Senate. The 3-7 club is made up of workers in the Third Precinct, Seventh District Democratic organization.

Prince Georges Rescue Squad Moving in on Stork

No deliveries of babies by Prince Georges County Rescue Squadmen were reported yesterday—for the first time in three days.

On Monday, three members of the Bladensburg Squad delivered a 7½-pound boy while the squad ambulance was speeding toward Georgetown Hospital. The Marlboro Squad performed a similar act Sunday at Largo while transporting a woman from Chesapeake Beach.

In Monday's episode, driver Wilmer Tippett passed along instructions from the wheel as he threaded his emergency vehicle through traffic. His fellow squadmen, William Doore, Thomas Peel and Frederick Tayman, delivered the baby. The mother, Mrs. Elizabeth Pessagno, 24, of 5700 Jennifer pl., East Riverdale, and her newborn son were reported doing well at the hospital.

Three Flee Burning Home On W St. N.W.

Three persons jumped for their lives from a second-story window of a burning home at 607 W st. nw. at 4:45 a. m. yesterday.

They were Joseph Brown, 40; his wife, Elizabeth, and their son, Joseph, jr., 15. The boy was treated for a cut leg at Freedmen's Hospital.

Alonzo Fields, 50, and Madaline Matthews, 38, who were sleeping on the first floor of the five-room, two-story brick house, escaped through the front door.

Although Brown told police he thought someone might have set fire to his house, investigators from the fire marshal's office who spent the day at the scene said they could find no evidence of arson. They said it was more likely the blaze was started by a cigarette dropped in the living room.

Damage was estimated at $3000.

Greenbelters to Picnic

An "all-family picnic" for residents of Greenbelt and their friends will be held at noon Monday at the Greenbelt recreational area. It is sponsored by Greenbelt Post No. 136, American Legion, the post's auxiliary, and the Greenbelt rescue squad.

Hearing Set On Change in Fairfax Rule

Fairfax County residents learned yesterday they may get a chance to vote on a change in county government next November.

Judge Paul E. Brown, of Fairfax Circuit Court, ordered a hearing for September 5 at 10 a. m. on a petition filed last May by residents seeking the government change.

The hearing was set to determine the validity of the petition. If it goes unquestioned, Judge Brown said he will set up the referendum procedure under which county residents can record their vote in the general election in November 7.

Sponsors of Government change said the petition had more than 1500 signers, about 50 percent more than needed under State law, which requires that 10 percent of the county's registered voters participate in such a request.

A 3-member commission was created three months ago by the Fairfax County Board of Supervisors to consider all types of administration available under State law. The commission is headed by Walter Crain, a Fairfax County builder, with David Lawrence, Washington columnist, as chairman of its executive committee.

Meanwhile, during public hearings and conferences with representatives of organizations, the commission has received testimony overwhelmingly in favor of the county manager form of Government. Virtually no mention has been made of other forms of government the county might adopt should it vote to change its existing supervisor, executive secretary system.

Falls Church Annexation Fight Revived

The City of Falls Church, Va. is going to take another run at annexing some of adjacent Fairfax County's territory.

Falls Church City Attorney LaRue Van Meter yesterday filed a notice of the city's intention to appeal the decision against annexation with the Fairfax Circuit Court.

Van Meter's notice followed city council's July 24 decision to appeal the case.

In his notice Van Meter did not state the grounds the city will use to re-argue the case. Notice of appeal is required before an appeal may be made.

Falls Church this summer lost its first plea to convince the court that the city is entitled to 10.75 square miles of county teritory lying to the south, west and east of the city.

The county charged the suit was an attempt to "rescue" Falls Church at a time when it was not in a financial position to meet its own needs. The annexation suit, Fairfax County contended, would give Falls Church "more people and property to contribute revenue to its treasury, and thus, for the time being at any rate," ensure continuance of the city's operation.

The county also contended Falls Church's present limits are "ample and sufficient for all its needs."

Peanut Company Official Dies En Route to Bank

A 55-year-old peanut company official collapsed on the street and died yesterday shortly before noon as he was on his way from his office to the bank.

He was Ezra N. Stirewalt, of 1366 Hamilton st. nw., executive secretary of the Schindler Peanut Co., with local offices at 914 11th st. se.

Police said Mr. Stirewalt collapsed in front of 726 11th st. se., and died of a heart attack.

He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Kathleen Leach Stirewalt; a daughter, Mrs. Margaret Hassler, of Westgate, Md.; a son, Robert Stirewalt, of Washington, and five brothers: J. M. Stirewalt of Washington, D. P. and J. P. Stirewalt of Luray, Va., Dr. A. J. Stirewalt, of Tokyo, Japan and M. L. Stirewalt, of Martinsburg, W. Va.

Mrs. Lawyer Dies; Former Eastern Teacher

Mrs. Florence Shipman Lawyer, 82, a teacher at Eastern High School before 1900, died at her home in Yonkers, N. Y., Sunday. She was the widow of Frederick C. Lawyer.

A graduate of Eastern in 1887, Mrs. Lawyer took a B. A. degree at George Washington University. She gave up her teaching career and moved to New York after her marriage in 1896.

Funeral services will be held in Yonkers and burial will be in Mount Olivet Cemetery here today.

Dr. Renn, 86, Dies; Norfolk Doctor 60 Years

Norfolk, Va., Aug. 29 (AP).—Dr. George A. Renn, 86, for 60 years a practicing physician in Norfolk, died today in United States Marine Hospital.

A specialist in treatment of the diseases of the eye, he was elected honorary president of the Virginia Society of Opthalmology and Otolaryngology, this year. He often said he had no desire to retire.

Edmund Caskie Dies; State Department Employe

Edmund Caskie, 54, an employe of the State Department's translation division for the past 15 years, died Monday in Suburban Hospital after a long illness. He lived at 27 East Williams la., Chevy Chase, Md.

He was a World War I veteran and a member of the George S. Patton, jr., Tanks Corps post of the American Legion. He is survived by his wife, Georgetta Dupuy Caskie, and two daughters, Georgette and Virginia, all of the Chevy Chase address.

Funeral services will be held at Fort Myer Chapel Thursday at 1 p. m., with burial in Arlington Cemetery.

J. R. Brelsford Dies, Former Berwyn Head

Funeral services for Jean R. Brelsford, 61, Internal Revenue Bureau section chief and former town commissioner of Berwyn Heights, Md., will be held today at 2 p. m. at his residence, 5712 Ruatan st., Berwyn Heights. Burial will be in Fort Lincoln Cemetery. Mr. Brelsford died Monday at Prince Georges County General Hospital of a heart condition.

An active Mason, he was past master of Birmingham Lodge in Beltsville and served 18 years as secretary.

Col. Davydov Dies

Moscow, Aug. 29 (AP).—The Russian Army newspaper Red Star today announced the death of Col. Alexander Davydov, chief of a section of the Ministry of Internal Affairs.

Davydov died unexpectedly, at the age of 54, according to an obituary signed by Internal Affairs Minister S. N. Kruglov and other high ranking officers.

He was described as "an important executive worker."

The dispatch, passed through Soviet censorship, did not further identify Davydov.

On November 10, 1949, the Russian-licensed Berlin newspaper Nacht Express quoted an Engineer, Davydov, as saying that atomic explosions were used to drive a canal through the Yurgai Mountains between the Ural Mountains and Kirgiz Range.

Dr. Morehead Dies

Salem, Va., Aug. 29 (AP).—Dr. James Caddall Morehead, a prominent educator and a native of Pulaski County, died at his home here yesterday.

Former Rep. Kennedy of Maryland Dies

Former Representative Ambrose J. Kennedy of Maryland, a leading sponsor of District legislation in the thirties, died of an intercranial hemorrhage yesterday in Baltimore's Mercy Hospital.

The 57-year-old Baltimore Democrat was found unconscious in his bed Monday night by his son, Baltimore City Councilman Ambrose J. Kennedy, jr.

Mr. Kennedy was elected to Congress in 1932 to fill out the unexpired term of Representative J. Charles Linthicum (D., Md.), who died in office, and was re-elected four more terms before he met defeat in the 1940 primary. He represented the Fourth Congressional District, located entirely within Baltimore.

At the time of his defeat, Mr. Kennedy was the ranking member of the House District Committee.

Mr. Kennedy sponsored legislation for local suffrage and backed legislation providing for studies to reorganize the municipal government.

In 1936, Mr. Kennedy introduced the bill repealing the "Red Rider" which forbade the payment of salaries to District teachers who discussed communism in the classroom. The Red Rider went out in 1937 with Mr. Kennedy leading the fight.

Mr. Kennedy was a member of the Baltimore City Council from 1922 to 1926, spent the next two years in the State Senate and re-signed in 1928 to become State Parole Commissioner.

After his defeat in Congress, Mr. Kennedy was appointed to the Maryland Unemployment Compensation Board. He resigned this post in 1945, and a few months later was convicted of violating the Hatch Act in carrying on political activities while in Federal pay status. He was forbidden to hold a State or Federal office for 18 months thereafter.

Dr. Dennison, D. C. Physician 60 Years, Dies

Dr. Ira W. Dennison, 85, a pioneer Washington physician, died Monday of a heart attack at his home, 2430 20th st. nw.

Dr. Dennison had practiced here for 60 years. Just a few hours before he died he had treated a patient at his home, where his offices were located.

He had been on the staff of Homeopathic Hospital since coming here in 1890. He was a native of Mystic, Conn., and received his medical degree from the New York Fifth Avenue and Flower Hospital.

Dr. Dennison was a member of the District Homeopathic Society, Sons of the American Revolution and St. Margaret's Episcopal Church.

He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Margaret Treut Dennison.

Services will be at 1:30 p. m. in Gawler's Chapel, 1756 Pennsylvania ave. nw. Burial will be private.

Karl Hardy, Securities Group Counsel, Dies

Funeral services will be held today at 4 p. m. for Karl J. Hardy, 44, general counsel for the National Securities Industrial Association, who died Monday in George Washington University Hospital after a year's illness. Services will be at Gawler's funeral home, 1756 Pennsylvania ave. nw., with burial Saturday in Salt Lake City.

Mr. Hardy

Mr. Hardy had lived here since 1927, when he became secretary of the Public Buildings Administration. He subsequently became associate general counsel of the Home Loan Bank Board in 1932, and in 1933 entered private law practice with the firm of Hardy, Reasoner & Kelley.

A native of Salt Lake City, he was graduated from the University of Utah and received a bachelor and master of laws degree from George Washington. He was a member of Phi Delta Theta and Phi Delta Phi, a legal fraternity.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Zella Smoot Hardy, who lived with him at 5175 Watson st. nw.; a daughter, Miss Jeremy Hardy; his parents, Karl D. and May Jeremy Hardy of Salt Lake City, and a brother, Glen E. Hardy, of 5018 V st. nw.

Airline Aide Goes Everywhere—on Paper

By Nicha Soure

MISS MARGARET GARD
. . . around the world on a map

SHE can tell you how many packs of cigarettes to take to Madrid, how to get from Orly to Le Bourget Airport across the city of Paris, and what clothes to take to Calcutta in the spring.

But Miss Marguerite Gard has never been out of the United States.

The international reservations agent for Trans-World Airlines in Washington "takes off" on a tour of distant points overseas by booking passengers and assisting them in planning their international travels.

Last year she handled more than 3000 bookings for overseas flights. The human element in her work is what interests Marguerite. She rarely sees any of the people to whom she talks but she feels that she knows them personally through her telephone conversations.

This past spring, for example, she talked a honeymoon couple into stepping up their wedding plans in order that they might take advantage of lower out-of-season rates and have more money to spend in Paris. She will map out a complete itinerary to anywhere, on request.

When it comes to helpful hints, Maggie is the girl to call. For example she advises all her clients to carry traveler's checks in small denominations. When converting money, some countries require all the money changed to be spent there or lost. If Mr. Brown carries $100 travelers checks and needs $35 in such a country, he must either spend the remaining $65 on articles he doesn't want or lose the money entirely. Mrs. Jones, who carries checks in $20 denominations, is much better off.

Nylon Wins Laurels For All Traveling

NOBODY, but nobody, can overstress the fine qualities of nylon for traveling, Maggie believes. In her own jaunts across the United States, she has found that lightweight suits are wonderful travelers, too.

Once a customer has decided to go abroad, Maggie starts working. Besides arranging reservations, she reminds the prospective traveler of his passport which might take from ten days to two weeks to get, his various disease immunization shots (more for the Middle East than for Europe), encourages him to make reservations back as a safeguard to the traveler, and reminds him about his luggage.

To the unseasoned traveler, 66 pounds sounds like a lot of luggage. Yet it's amazing how easy it is to go over the alloted poundage, Maggie says. However, the rules allow a passenger to wear one coat, carry another, and have either a book or a magazine in hand. Women are also allowed their purses.

Heavy restrictions on import have been lifted by most European countries, but there are still some limitations. Fortunately, most travelers ask about cigarettes before departing and thorough instructions can be given.

The chain smoker had better make some arrangements before visiting Madrid, Maggie warns. There only three or four packs in the purse or pocket are allowed. What the airline suggests is taking the number of cartons desired and leaving them "in bond" at the Madrid airport. These he will be able to pick up again when he leaves the city.

Babies Take Well To the Air

BABIES, contrary to prevalent opinion, make good travelers. At their service, the air lines provide pasteurized milk, diaper service and a bassinet. But, for formula babies, Maggie says, "Bring the formula along. It keeps for the length of the trip at high altitude."

The American woman traveler is most concerned about cosmetics. Liquids in full bottles may explode at a high altitude, so travelers are warned to keep bottles only two-thirds full.

A year or so ago, Trans World set out to find the typical traveler, statistically speaking. Offhand, it was presupposed that the American businessman would earn the title. So, when actual statistics showed that the American housewife was the average airline customer, even TWA was surprised.

Marguerite entered TWA service in the pioneering stage of international air travel four years ago. It is through questions asked by travelers then that airlines today have such complete information about Europe at their fingertips. Sights being data and general information about climate and currency abroad have been available to Baedeker readers for generations, but modern airline information service goes far beyond that. A tourist can leave Washington today knowing that a cold snap has just hit Paris, or that it's due to rain in London when she lands. Out of her suitcase comes the tweed suit or galoshes—it's as easy as that to keep up with the weather in today's world.

Travelers baffled by ordinary timetables would be utterly confused by the vast array of information at Marguerite's fingertips.

Can Answer Queries With Flick of Wrist

IN HER telephone conversations she can answer a million questions by a flick of the wrist or by turning her head. To her left is a domestic flight board with little red keys denoting a full flight. Under the glass top of her desk is a map of the United States and to her left on the desk is an intricate file for reservations, both completed and pending.

Would this "paper traveller" go abroad herself? You can bet your life she would! Naturally, she would fly.

She hopes to go overseas within a year, either on her own or on one of her company's "familiarization flights."

Cairo in the spring is the place that most appeals to her. She says Cairo is entirely different from American or Western European cities. But, she adds, with a twinkle in her eye, if she went to Cairo, she would be able to visit the major European cities en route. That would kill two birds with one plane ticket, says the vicariously-travelled Maggie!

Mary Haworth's Mail

Ready to Start on Teaching Career, Bachelor Who's Been Playing the Field for Years Hopes To Marry Soon, But Ideal Girl Can't Be Found

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a nice guy and have bounced around plenty, maybe for more years than I should. Intellectually and socially I am the very competent, quite pleasant male; but I cannot locate any girl who has enough intellectual oomph to satisfy my craving for love, companionship and stimulation.

I am searching for a beauty whom I can respect and genuinely admire. But all I find are girls or young widows who disgust me by their humdrum concepts and stunted minds. Mary, the girls in my city are simply dodos.

They cannot discuss the theater or arts; they read only the women's magazines, if those; they can't ride or play tennis; they have no real feeling for drinking beer of a summer evening,—and yet they hope for a good man to come along and love and cherish them! Although most of the girls I have courted have gone to college, I fear they are mostly geared to a comic-book mentality.

When I was 18 I met and loved a girl who was outstanding mentally, physically and socially. I was entirely absorbed in her for several years. But she was mature and I was not, and finally she shook me off and married another.—a man who was better able to fulfill the role of husband than I; and I still feel she was the perfect wife-and-mother type.

Must He Settle for Second Rate?

MY hopes and experiences of love were nil for three years thereafter; but in my late twenties I grew more independent and came into my own—even to the point of being somewhat in demand socially. My confidence and zest surged upward dramatically, and for the past five years I've lived to the hilt. I feel that now I am precisely at the point where I should take a lovely wife and settle down, for I am entering a chosen profession—teaching—and I would like to start contributing to community life via family life, and cultivate my more serious and responsible side. In short, I am ready to stop helling around. But, Mary, where's the babe?

Will I find my ideal teaching the second grade somewhere? Or will I have to make another search through the big town? Must I settle for someone second-rate, oh, awful fate! Or IS there a babe for the likes of me?

R. J.

Looks Are Key to Personality

DEAR R. J.: If you are beating the bushes for a "babe," no wonder you've been wearied by comic-book mentalities. By "babe" I mean what you mean also, a girl whose flesh and personality suggest an Esquire drawing—an houri-type not found in nature, but rather dreamed up by the male libido. This you want, but you also pine to find a lovely Madonna soul and Minerva wisdom contained in the package, which is asking the impossible. Individuals look like what they are,—and a thoughful young woman doesn't resemble a pin-up cutie.

Time and again in years of reading I've encountered the opinion stated by famous, worldly-wise, mature-minded men, that a plain-looking woman seems better suited for love than prize beauties are,—hence makes a dearer wife and happier social companion.

Perhaps this is a matter of smart compensation, they suggest. Perhaps the plainer girl has realized that she must earn appreciation, with gentle, thoughtful, gracious ways, and real devotion to others' comfort; whereas the beauty is conditioned to take adulation for granted as her due, and doesn't know how to cherish a man's ego, and thus become indispensable to him.

Basically, you aren't fondly disposed towards womankind at this time. Rather you are "belling around" in the so-called battle of the sexes. In speaking of "babes" you are trying to upstage the opposite sex, at least in your own mind, with an assumed air of blithe disdain generally keyed to the theory that you've become competent to master any female. No doubt this bravura means that you are angry about, and afraid of, a woman's power to hurt a man's spirit,—an unconscious attitude that had its origins in unsatisfactory relations with your mother and was sharply intensified by your disappointment in love some years ago.

Feels Inferior to Other Males

YOU'VE heard, of course, that "Beauty lies in the eyes of the beholder." Also that "Pretty is as pretty does." My advice is to employ your wife-hunt as opportunity to explore the truth of these sayings. Don't ignore all but the prettiest girls, the most popular and socially prominent.

As you go about socially, give the plain girls, the unknowns, a chance to disclose the complexities of their personality to you. Treat them, especially, with attentive, sincere courtesy. In so doing, you may find that you've constituted yourself a modern Pygmalion, invoking great loveliness not apparent until your application brought it forth.

Further, I advise you to recognize the significance of your men to marry a conspicuously desirable girl—a super-duper model of incomparable perfection. When a man loves a girl, he thinks she is all he needs, which is natural. But when you are asking every endowment and not finding it, you are signifying a sense of sexual inferiority to other men—maybe due to the blow of being ousted by a rival in the experience of first love. And you are advertising the hope that some day, somehow, you'll reassert magic superiority by acquiring a mate whose evident charms will make other men's luck seem pale in comparison.

Your Figure, Madame

Little Woman Has Trouble With Waistline

By Ida Jean Kain

FIGURES prove that the little woman five feet two or under has a most difficult time keeping any semblance of a waistline. And to make bad matters worse, the amphora curve of the hip has an affinity for fat padding.

Let's face it . . . that's what comes of having a short-waisted figure. The test is the span betwixt the natural waist and the top of the hipbone. It won't take long to find the facts . . . place hand on waist, fingers encircling waist, palms forward. Now starting there, measure the distance between that nebulous line and the top of the hipbone—sort of prod around the padding. If that span measures barely two inches, and the waist nestles practically on the top of the hipbones . . . it's plain to see what you are up against.

Ten Extra Pounds Causes a Calamity

IT'S THAT area more than anything else that marks the difference between streamlines and bulges. Add ten excess pounds to the figure that is short-waisted, and the result is a dumpy figure. What can be done about it? Two things . . . Most important is to keep the calories from going over the top of energy requirements, for all the extra ones crowd the middle measurement.

The decision must first be made in your mind . . . you simply refuse to have a dumpy figure. That being settled, you turn down rich desserts and leave off the fattening trimmings as a matter of course.

Back this up with one more calory trick . . . practice getting up from the dinner table feeling as if you could eat a little more. It's the best slimming habit to form, for the late-day calories are the most likely to go to fat. It will take only a couple of weeks to get the knack of curbing calories.

Bending doesn't hurt . . .

Stretch and Bend For Shapeliness

THEN GET your bearings on exercise. It doesn't take much exercise, but with a short-waisted figure, hitting the exact area is all important. To make sure you're in the groove, take your stretchers in front of a mirror with next to nothing on.

The exercise technique is to stretch and bend. Start with a stretch but make sure to center it through the area that needs slimming. Very slowly raise right arm up and pull slim all through the middle of your figure. Then, holding the upstretch, gently bend to the left. Do not try to bend too far at first . . . stretch up with left arm and bend to the right, as far as comfortable.

As muscles become more supple, increase the bend and slide the opposite arm down below the knee. Make it a smooth bend . . . keeping the up-pull centered. Before long you'll feel so much more svelte . . . and oh what a wonderful feeling . . .

Black Leads Color Parade

Although coats have gone colored in a big way, black is still tops when it comes to dresses. It's dressy sophisticated black too—partly because of the dress fabrics, partly because the new sheath silhouette is ultra-sophisticated in itself, partly because of the revival of beading, embroidery and braiding, plus "diamond" jeweled buttons.

So certainly your first fall dress will be black; black faille orsupple black silk of some sort; black taffeta or one of the new all black brocades; black velvet or black velveteen; black wool or black worsted jersey.

Yes, it's consistent with colored coats—as a matter of fact it's easier to wear black dresses with these than it is to match or blend colors.

Warrenton Horse Show Sets Pace for Gay Holiday Week-end

By Elizabeth Maguire

LABOR DAY, turning point of the seasons, is upon us. Those in town are packing to go away, and those who are out-of-town are making plans to return. It's a weekend for traveling.

The Warrenton Horse Show on Saturday will draw a large number from Washington. Chief Justice and Mrs. Fred M. Vinson are planning to attend as guests of Mr. and Mrs. Francis D. Thomas. They will spend the weekend at "North Rock"; the Thomas estate, and they will be among the guests at a subscription dinner dance to be held at the former home of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Windmills on Saturday night.

Fred Vinson, jr., and Jimmy Vinson are going down with their parents, and the entire Thomas family—Nancy, Hugh, Francis and Stephen—will also be there. Mr. and Mrs. William Rochester will have as a house guest one of the judges, Christopher Wadsworth.

Rear Admiral and Mrs. Dwight R. Dickinson have already left for Maine, and Col. and Mrs. Anthony J. Drexel Biddle are leaving for Akron, Ohio, where the colonel will be the guest of the Polish Legion of American War Veterans. He will make a speech before their national convention on Saturday night.

Maid of Cotton Betrothed

THE 1950 Maid of Cotton is engaged. Miss Elizabeth Agnes McGee, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Tom Quarles McGee of Spartanburg, S. C., will marry Robert Payne Richardson, 4th, in November. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Payne Richardson of Reidsville, N. C.

MISS ELIZABETH McGEE
. . . Maid of Cotton engaged

When Miss McGee was a student at Holton Arms Junior College in this city, she was president of the student council, president of her class, and a member of the honor council.

Her studies were interrupted in January, when she was chosen to represent the Cotton States on a good will fashion tour of cities in America, England and France.

Before attending Holton Arms, she was graduated from St. Catherine's School in Richmond, Va.

She made her debut at the Assembly Ball in Spartanburg in 1948, and she is a member of the Junior Spinsters and La Jeunesse Clubs of Spartanburg.

Mr. Richardson was graduated from Woodberry Forest School and received his B. S. degree from Davidson College, N. C. During World War II he served in the United States Navy.

English Visitors Busy Here

SIR CECIL WEIR, chairman of the Dollar Export Board, was the guest in whose honor the British Counselor, James Currie, and Mrs. Currie entertained last evening at a dinner at their home. Other guests were officials of ECA, the Department of Commerce, and the British Embassy. Sir Cecil arrived in town last Saturday and is leaving today for New York, whence he will sail for London at the end of the week.

Other visitors from London, Sir Evelyn and Lady Wrench, who arrived in town Monday night, will be here until Thursday. Sir Evelyn is founder of the English Speaking Union, and yesterday he was honored at a luncheon given by Lynch Luquer, a former president of the English Speaking Union. The luncheon was held at the Willard Hotel.

Gloges

MISS MARY ANN ROBB, debutante daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry John Robb, was graduated in June from Holton Arms School, and this fall she will enter Wells College at Aurora, N. Y. She will be presented to society at a reception on December 21 in Bethesda at the home of her parents. Miss Robb has been spending the summer at White Sulphur Springs and Bermuda.

"Faith of Our Fathers," Paul Green's pageant produced by the National Capital Sesquicentennial Commission, was attended last evening by Sir Evelyn and Lady Wrench; the Earl of Jellicoe, First Secretary at the British Embassy, and Mr. and Mrs. John Fletcher.

The Roanoke Island Historical Association, producers of the "Lost Colony," invited Sir Evelyn and Lady Wrench to Matteo, N. C., to be honor guests on a celebrities night performance of Paul Green's pageant there, and Sir Evelyn took a small walk-on part. Another pageant by Paul Green, "The Common Glory" at Williamsburg, Va., was also attended by Sir Evelyn and Lady Wrench. They were accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Fletcher. The latter, who writes under the name Ind[illegible]s Fletcher, has just finished a book on colonial America.

Mme. Pandit, Ambassador of India, is going up to New York to say farewell to Mme. Unni Nayar, wife of the former public relations attache, who was killed recently in Korea. Mme. Nayar is returning to India, flying by way of England.

New Member of Pool Family

WHEN MR. AND MRS. COCHRAN POOL sail for the Argentine in the early fall, they will take with them a new member of the family, a small daughter named Amanda Grayson Pool, born August 23 in Lynchburg, Va.

Until recently Mr. Pool was American Consul in Bermuda, and he has been assigned as First Secretary of the American Embassy in Buenos Aires. Mrs. Pool is the former Miss Jane Wilson of Lynchburg and Washington.

The Belgian Counselor, Roger Taymans, Miss Sophie Mayer, niece of Mme. Bonnet, Pierre Jaspar, Belgian Counselor, and Mrs. Anita Branger, Third Secretary at the Venezuelan Embassy, returned Monday from a weekend at Lenox, Mass., where they were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Andre Visson.

Mme. Bonnet, wife of the French Ambassador, is expected to return from Paris the middle of September.

The Smiths are moving to Washington. Mr. and Mrs. Gregory Smith of New York and Southampton have bought a house on Kalorama Circle, and Gerard Smith, a brother from the same environs, is bringing his family to live at Ratcliffe Manor, their home at Easton, Md. Gregory and Gerard were in Washington during the last war, and are returning to take Government jobs.

Margaret Putting On Weight

MISS BARBARA HEGGIE of Brewster, N. Y., is in Washington looking up friends like Miss Jane Lingo and Mrs. John Horton, the former Miss Drucie Snyder. Her purpose is to gather material for a story on Miss Margaret Truman, scheduled to appear this fall in the Woman's Home Companion.

In a recent talk with Miss Truman, Miss Heggie noted that Margaret complained she was putting on a little weight. "Sometimes I hoist myself from the sofa," she laughed, "and go for a walk around the reservoir, but I don't go far."

The First Daughter is spending the summer working hard at her singing lessons. Her visit to Luxembourg as the guest of United States Minister, Mrs. Perle Mesta, will be next summer.

Miss Heggie is the daughter of the late actor, O. P. Heggie.

Ensign Jones to Wed Evelyn Loveless

Mrs. Edna G. Loveless announces the engagement of her daughter, Miss Evelyn Marie Loveless, to Ensign Floyd Thomas Jones, jr., USN, son of Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Thomas Jones of Arlington. The wedding will take place in the fall.

Martha Brown, Mary Kenner To Be Brides

Mrs. W. E. Brown announces the engagement of her daughter, Martha Weldon, to Mack Stacy, son of Mrs. Mack Stacy and the late Mr. Stacy of Wynne, Ark. The wedding will take place September 14 at the Hughes Methodist Church in Silver Spring.

The bride is a graduate of the University of Georgia where she received her bachelor of business administration degree. She is a member of Alpha Lambda Delta honorary fraternity. For the past four years she has been a member of the staff of Senator Richard B. Russell here.

Mr. Stacy received his bachelor of electrical engineering degree from Georgia Tech. During World War II he attended Indiana University in the ASTP program and later served in the European theater. He attended George Washington University Law School this year, making his home with his uncle, Lt. Col. Jean K. Stacy, and Mrs. Stacy.

The engagement of Miss Mary Ann Kenner, daughter of Mrs. Clare Warfield Kenner and the late Dr. Harry Roland Kenner, to John Larsen Du Pont of Savannah, Ga., has been announced.

Miss Kenner attended Georgetown Visitation Convent and was graduated from St. Joseph's College in Emmitsburg, Md. She is now the associate editor of Allied Youth, Inc. She has recently returned from visiting friends in England, Scotland and France.

Mr. Du Pont was graduated from Mount St. Mary's College in Emmitsburg and during the war he served with the Army Air Force in Scotland. He did postgraduate work at Catholic University. He is now associated with the Ford Division of Ford Motors in Dearborn, Mich.

Not One Whit Too Early To Start Packing If You Plan A Move In October

ARE you on the move? If not, you may be before long. Fall is the time of all times for change of address. Anticipating a bout with packing box and moving van, C. G. writes:

DEAR ANNE:

We plan to move to another town on or about October 1—and I really would like to plan for it this time. I want to get as much as possible done early. Can you give me some tips on organizing the work and on properly packing various items, such as linens, books, etc.?

C. G., Bethesda, Md.

The latest issue of the Department of Agriculture's "Food and Home Notes" has some good suggestions on this subject, C. G. Here is what they say:

Start weeks ahead looking over stored possessions in attic, basement and closets. Discard, sell or give away anything without material or sentimental value. Each member of the family should decide on which of his own belongings to keep. Pack these in small cartons, firmly tied and labeled, to go in trunks later.

Go over letters and papers. Valuable papers are safest in the bank, but they should all be found, separated, and a record kept of their location.

Packing days will be easier if packing materials are assembled in advance—strong cardboard cartons of various sizes and shapes, string, rope, old newspapers, and wooden barrels for breakables. Keep an inventory as packing proceeds. Label each container not only as to contents but also as to its location in the new home.

Books can be packed early in small or medium-sized containers and tied with strong ropes by which movers can carry them. Linens should be packed tight in flat containers, silver wrapped securely against shifting and kept in a safe place. Kitchen utensils and gadgets, packed in newspapers, can go in large cardboard cartons, but handles should not stick out from ends.

If it's to be a long haul—and the china and glass is to be packed by the family instead of a professional—remember wooden barrels are best. Line the bottom with several inches of excelsior, shredded newspaper or straw. Wrap plates in two thicknesses of paper between each one and set on edge with bottom toward the outside. Flat dishes packed horizontally are easily cracked. Fill the center of the container with carefully wrapped serving dishes and cups, giving special care to handles. Line the top, like the bottom, with soft, thick packing.

DEAR ANNE:

Would you be kind enough to tell a newcomer to this area where she may find a recipe for real old-fashioned pecan pie?

E. B. H., Annapolis, Md.

Here is a Southern pecan pie, E. B. H., made with dark corn syrup:

SOUTHERN PECAN PIE

1 cup unbroken pecan meats
2 tablespoons butter
1 cup sugar
1 cup dark corn syrup
2 eggs, beaten
1 teaspoon vanilla
½ teaspoon salt
1 pastry shell (9-inch), raw

Line pie plate with pastry. Arrange pecan meats over the pastry. Cream butter and sugar together thoroughly, then add remaining ingredients, beating well. Pour into unbaked pastry shell over pecans and bake in a very hot oven (450 degrees Fahrenheit) 10 minutes, then reduce to moderate (350 degrees) and bake 30 to 35 minutes or until knife inserted in center comes out clean. Cool. Good served with whipped cream.

PETUNIA!

How stodgy other
Puddings seem,
Compared with smooth
Ambrosia Cream!

And it's so easy to make, Petunia! Use orange juice instead of milk in packaged vanilla pudding, pour over orange slices, and top with shredded cocoanut. Delicious!

Melva Lind Named Dean At Miami University

Oxford, Ohio, Aug. 29.—Dr. Melva Lind, for the past two years associate in higher education at the national headquarters of the American Association of University Women, Washington, D. C., is the new dean of women at Miami University here.

Appointment of Miss Lind as dean of women and professor of French has been announced by Dr. Ernest H. Hahne, Miami president.

The new dean will be in charge of approximately 2000 women. Miami's expected total enrollment during the coming academic year is 5000.

"Dr. Lind will bring to Miami an extensive knowledge of the latest trends and developments in American colleges," Dr. Hahne said.

"She has an unusual background both from her extensive knowledge of A. A. U. surveys and from her personnel work."

As a member of the United States Committee on the Interchange of Teachers, she has just finished her duties in the orientation program for exchange teachers held in Washington.

A native of Minneapolis, Miss Lind received her bachelor of arts degree from the University of Minnesota. She studied for six years abroad, as well as in Mexico and Canada; received her doctor's degree from the University of Paris.

She went to her Washington position in 1948 from Mount Holyoke College where she had been a member of the French department and directrice of the French-language house.

She is also a member of the American Association of University Professors, the National Association of Deans of Women, the National Education Association, the Society for the Advancement of Education, the Modern Language Association of America, the American Association of Teachers of French and the Arts Club of Washington.

Customer

A customer is one who buys . . . The merchandise for sale . . . In person or by telephone . . . By telegraph or mail . . . He may be quick in purchasing . . . Or he may take his time . . . And he may spend quite lavishly . . . Or try to save a dime . . . He may be very critical . . . Of all that he inspects . . . Or casually indifferent towards . . . The item he selects . . . But he is just as mighty and . . . Important as can be . . . For he is indispensable . . . To our economy . . . And when there is a question or . . . An argument in sight . . . The merchant wise is he who says . . . The customer is right.

Are We Alert for Attack?

Panic Can Be More Lethal Than A-Bomb

This is the third of a series of five articles describing America's preparation for a possible atomic attack. George W. Herald was chief of the Berlin and Vienna bureaus of an American press association from 1945 to 1949. During the war he served in a United States Army airborne supply unit and as deputy chief of the German section of the American broadcasting station in Europe.

CHAPTER THREE

By George W. Herald

Last week I met Mr. and Mrs. Killjoy in our apartment house elevator. They had lived in the building for 12 years. Now they were moving.

"We are going to Mexico," Mr. Killjoy said. "This city is no longer a safe place to live in."

I told him I agreed, there is too darn much traffic.

"We're not worried by the traffic," he answered. "We just don't care to be hit by an A-bomb."

No amount of reasoning could have made them change their minds.

There are a good many Killjoys in the country today. Quietly, almost clandestinely, they have started a new migration to what they think are safer areas.

Every day, Lieut. Col. Barnet W. Beers, the War Department's liaison officer for civil defense, receives letters from people asking him for "travel advice."

"I have friends who own a lead mine," a Midwestern school teacher wrote Colonel Beers. "Don't you think it's a good place to hole up in during this crisis?"

Another character in San Francisco asked what he should do if an atom bomb fell on his safe deposit box and made his stocks and bonds radioactive.

A lady from Columbus, Ohio, requested a folder of maps indicating the latest evacuation routes.

Ninety-nine percent of Americans will, of course, feel tied to their communities by their jobs and homes. But how are they going to behave if the situation gets really tough?

Most of us remember that evening of October 30, 1938, when Orson Welles presented his radio show, "The War of the Worlds." As the imaginary invaders from Mars landed in the Hudson River Valley, thousands of listeners jumped into their cars and rode off in all directions.

If that is how we would react to an atomic alert, experts agree that it would give much comfort to the enemy.

"Victory in the field would be of no use to a people paralyzed by fear," Lewis L. Straus, former member of the Atomic Energy Commission, warned the other day.

Maj. Gen. Merritt A. Edson, United States Marine Corps, retired, declared:

"It won't do us much good to have the most powerful ground forces in the world, if the home front . . . can be thrown into chaos. A panic can easily kill more people than the A-bomb itself."

What causes panic? Why do people placidly go to Miami, for instance, although the town is a known "target" for hurricanes unlashing far more energy than an atomic explosion?

Dr. Ralph E. Lapp, one of the Government's atomic defense consultants, has the answer:

"Miami visitors know the city is ready to cope with this type of disaster and is all set to protect their lives," he explains. "What makes people jittery is the unknown, the unprecedented and the lack of preparation."

Officials Apathetic

According to Dr. Lapp, the Hiroshima death toll was so high because local officials were apathetic and hadn't planned for organized relief.

In Nagasaki, 10,000 lives might have been saved had there been an efficient detection system. As it was, people weren't properly alerted and had no time to take shelter.

More than 60,000 persons died in Hamburg during a series of incendiary raids in July, 1943, because the city was short of fire-fighting equipment.

On the other hand, Britain's civil defense worked so smoothly that she suffered fewer casualties during the entire war than occurred in Germany during a single week. That's perhaps the main reason the British never lost their nerve.

I will never forget a scene I witnessed during a V-1 alert in London in August, 1944. Hundreds of music lovers were sitting around a bandstand in Hyde Park, listening to valse melodies while Hitler's guided missiles were roaring through the sky right over their heads. Not one of them even lifted his eyes!

Drawing the lessons from these World War II experiences, Dr. Lapp urges every American to see that the defense of his community will function without a hitch. In our free country, this is not only his privilege but his duty.

A-Bomb Rules

He ought to take his precautions as an individual and observe the rules listed by Col. William L. Wilson, assistant to the Surgeon General:

1. Should an alert sound, take cover in basements or underground shelters. Get the most possible amount of material between you and the burst. Subways and the lower floors of reinforced concrete buildings offer "perfect protection" against anything but a direct hit. Stay under cover for about 90 seconds after the A-bomb burst.

2. Scrub down and change clothes as soon as possible. The bathing should include hair, face, hands and fingernails. If you do that, small amounts of radiation outside the body won't leave any ill effects on you.

3. Don't eat, drink or smoke anything after a raid until it is checked, as even tiny doses of radiation inside the body can cause you much trouble.

4. If you need treatment or have lost your home, report to the nearest first aid and evacuation center.

5. Don't spread rumors. Keep your experiences to yourself and don't enlarge on what you hear from others.

6. If you feel strong enough, go out and help others. Thousands of lives can be saved by prompt aid.

These simple instructions represent the best advice our Army physicians have to offer at this time. If it is generally followed, they are certain that A-bomb casualties in an average American city can be cut down by 90 percent.

Tomorrow: The A-bomb has its limits, too.

Arlington Doctor Urges 2-Point Plan to Treat Handicapped

By N. S. Haseltine
Post Reporter

An Arlington, Va., bone specialist yesterday outlined what he termed a "workable" plan for the care and rehabilitation of the Nation's physically crippled.

Dr. O. Anderson Engh, medical director of the Anderson Orthopedic Hospital and Clinic, Arlington, proposed that community rehabilitation centers and regional centers be set up to give "whole" treatment to the disabled.

He spoke in the third day of the fifth biennial convention, American Federation of the Physically Handicapped. Final meetings of the convention are scheduled today at Hotel Statler.

Helsinki Plan Cited

The community rehabilitation centers, Dr. Engh said, should be part of a large general hospital or medical center, and might well be modeled after one now in operation at Helsinki, Finland.

At the Helsinki center, the speaker said, physical therapy, vocational guidance, psychiatric counsel and other aspects of rehabilitation which usually follow surgical and medical treatment are merged. As a result, he said, many patients are learning new skills even before the doctor or surgeon has completed treatments.

The new-type rehabilitation centers should be set up chiefly on an outpatient basis, Dr. Engh said. Separate dormitories would be included for the less disabled, who would be provided workshops for training in the manual arts within their physical capacities.

Treatment for All Cases

The regional centers, he said, would be for those too severely crippled to be treated under a community-sponsored project. These larger centers would accommodate the chronic cases, those patients whose severe ailments "are often due to the delay between the physician or surgeon's treatment and the necessary follow-up care," he said.

Much can now be done to correct or ease physical defects caused by poliomyelitis, bone infections, spastic paralysis and other diseases and afflictions, Dr. Engh said. Tendon transferences successfully give movement in cases of polio, and bone-fusing operations stabilize joints made useless by disease, he said.

He urged that some sort of a pilot program, perhaps on a Federal scale, be set up to demonstrate the value of prompt and intensive care of victims of physical handicaps. His proposed regional centers, he said, already have a good model, that of the Woodrow Wilson Rehabilitation Center, at Fishersville, Va.

H. Richard McCamant, rehabilitation officer of the United States Civil Service Commission, told the commission is resurveying its 6000 types of Federal positions to determine their "minimal physical demands." As the year-long project progresses, he said, more and more Federal positions may be opened up to the physically handicapped.

Col. Robert S. Allen, Washington news columnist and a vice president of the AFPH, was toastmaster at the organization's annual banquet last night.

New Color TV Is 'Superior,' Firm Asserts

A new color television set reportedly "superior" to others demonstrated before the Federal Communications Commission was announced yesterday by Color Television, Inc., of San Francisco.

In a petition to the FCC, the company asked for reopening of hearings on color TV held over the last few months to see if it is ready for commercial use. No wave-length is have been assigned to commercial color yet.

The FCC had been expected to announce its decision about September 1 on the basis of previous tests conducted with color systems offered by Columbia Broadcasting System, Radio Corporation of America and CTI, which presented an earlier version.

CTI's petition included a statement by McIntoh & Inglis, independent Washington engineering firm, stating the new CTI set is "superior" to any of the others. Among advantages claimed for CTI's "uniplex" system are these:

Existing black-and-white receivers could be converted with a small and inexpensive unit plus a direct-view color tube.

Old sets could receive the new color system in black-and-white with no alteration.

Simpler, cheaper and more reliable sets are possible with "uniplex." Color fidelity would be superior and there would "theoretically" be less interference.

Maryland Town Asks For Gas Line to Rockville

The city of Frederick, Md., asked the Federal Power Commission yesterday to order Transcontinental Gas Pipe Line Corp., Houston, Tex., to sell natural gas to the Frederick Gas Co.

Starting in Fall

Donlevy to Put TV Program on Film

—By Syd Kronish—

NEW YORK (AP).—Screen Star Brian Donlevy, hero of NBC's thriller series, "Dangerous Assignment," hopes to embark on a new adventure this fall in television. Donlevy wants to make half-hour films of "Dangerous Assignment" for video. He thinks a film version of this type program would be more effective than live. The broad-shouldered actor is financing the project himself and is enthusiastic about the deal.

Donlevy

One-time soldier, aviator, Annapolis midshipman and Broadway thespian, Donlevy says, "I'm having a lot of fun doing radio work and I think TV will be fun, too.

"That's my philosophy of life. It's very simple," he explains. "Enjoy whatever you're doing. If it isn't fun, don't do it—no matter how much money is involved. I'd just as soon live in a tent as this luxurious suite of rooms."

As a word of advice to young actors and actresses, Donlevy says, "The first and most important attribute of an actor is the will to be an actor. You must want to be an actor. Then, just be yourself at all times. Be natural."

For 15 years Donlevy starred on the Broadway stage in such hits as "What Price Glory," "Hit the Deck" and "The Milky Way." His film roles include leads in "Beau Geste," "Wake Island," "The Great McGinty" and "Command Decision."

ONLY a year ago Rosemary Clooney was doing one-nighters with a dance band. Today she is one of the busiest young singers in radio and television. A refreshing new personality, she's the newest star in the CBS lineup.

Right now Rosemary is featured on both the weekly "Songs for Sale" program and the Vaughn Monroe caravan. Last week marked the conclusion of her "Sing It Again" show which was a summer replacement deal. Starting in the fall she will star in a daily half-hour video variety program for CBS-TV.

The Clooney family, as well as all the townspeople in Maysville, Ky., are mighty proud of Rosemary because she is still the same unaffected girl who won the local amateur singing contests every year.

WHICH colors best suit the television cameras? It would be easier to tell which colors do not look well before the cameras. These are the words of Elwell, NBC's one-name art director. "Both black and white are more or less taboo," he explains. "Black reflects too little light and white too much.

"A white dress or shirt creates a black halo around the wearer and throws black shadows under the eyes. Anything that looks white on TV is actually dyed a pale or 'television' blue," Elwell reveals.

When it comes to fashions, simplicity is the key word—simplicity of lines and patterns.

Two new clients have sponsored Gabriel Heatter's newscasts over MBS. That makes his five-a-week evening programs solid commercially. The cost for the time and talent for these two Heatter shots is over one million dollars a year.

WEATHER—From P. B-1

Several D. C. Areas Flooded

teletype knocked out for two hours during the storm. The precinct was in the area of the heaviest rains.

Police reported all sewer top forced off by the heavy rains in the Broad Branch rd. area, from Brandywine st. to Nebraska. ave. Trees were reported down at 3025 Vermont ave., 14th and Missouri ave. nw., 8th and Maryland ave. ne. and 1443 Kennedy st. nw.

The 6th Precinct reported calls for help of all kinds, among them several reports that hail had cut awnings to ribbons.

At 5th and Rittenhouse sts. nw., several children who went out to play in the water got caught as he floods rose and had to be pulled back by older boys.

Trees and wires were reported down in both Takoma Park and Chevy Chase, where the height of the storm was between 3:30 and 3:45 p. m.

75 Calls for Aid

The District Sewer Department received about 75 calls for assistance, of which about 60 came from the Piney Branch area at 5th and Ingraham sts., from the 5300 block of 16th st. nw. and from Alton st. nw.

District officials said the Piney Branch area storm sewers were too small to handle the flood of waters. They said they hope to expand the system there next year.

The Weather Bureau wasn't making any promises last night that there won't be more flash floods again today. The weatherman said the rain might "fall in the same spot" or fall in a section of the District not yet hit.

They called yesterday's rainfall a "scattered thundershower" and forecast more of the same for today. Yesterday the temperature hit a high of 87 degrees at 1:40 p. m. and a low of 73 at 7:10 a. m.

Continued humidity and another 87 high are in prospect today, the weatherman said.

Alleged Kidnap Victim, Suspect Still Missing

By The Associated Press

The whereabout of 15-year-old Mary Christine Walter, Landover Hills girl reported kidnaped Sunday, were still unknown yesterday. Prince Georges County police reported.

Christine is said by her mother to have been taken from her home at 4114 71st ave., late Sunday night by a 19-year-old neighbor, Robert C. Armiger of 4602 72nd ave. in a 1940 black coupe. The mother, Mrs. Stanley A. Walter, swore out a warrant charging Armiger with kidnaping.

The DISTRICT LINE by Bill Gold

Bill Gold is on vacation. His column today takes the form of a letter to his managing editor.

Dear Boss:

I have just discovered that if a fellow has enough nerve to try it, he can stop at the best hotels without money. For a while, at least.

Eventually, I guess the cops would catch up with him.

As you know, before I left Washington I changed my vacation paycheck into "travelers cheques." Up to this point, I paid my way with them.

But as we checked out of the Vernon Manor in Cincinnati, I noted that we had charged everything from food to laundry to our account, and an impulse seized me.

I took out a blank bank check, filled it in for the proper amount, and handed it over. "Thank you," said the cashier, "and come visit us again."

And with that, I went out of her life—probably forever. She didn't know me from a bale of hay, but that little slip of paper, allegedly payable on a distant bank, was accepted without question.

I guess I must have an honest face.

We filled up the gas tank (25 cents a gallon, the cheapest to date) and set out along the river road to Indiana.

The flood walls we saw up-river have also been built here, and a brand new elevated highway is being constructed near the 6th st. viaduct, to eliminate a growing bottleneck.

There are no speed limits in Indiana, except in built-up areas, and we swept quickly down the broad superhighway to Lawrenceburg and Aurora, and past the huge distilleries which have been the chief industries here for generations.

Sleepy Dillsboro and its famous health resort is just as sleepy as ever. Not a rockingchair moved on the entire length of the front porch as we drove by.

The watermelon and hard cider stands that dot the highway were too much to resist. We didn't make very good time today, but we can speak highly of both products.

At North Vernon, where the main railroad line splits, we had our choice of turning north to Indianapolis, or south to Louisville.

The coin we flipped must have stood on end. Somehow, we emerged with the decision to head straight west on Route 50 to St. Louis.

At Shoals, Ind., we saw a Greyhound bus pull in beside the Shoals Cafe. "I'm hungry enough to eat the spare tire," said Bernice. "Let's try it."

For $2.95 the three of us had our choice of steak or fried chicken, with all the trimmings. And it was out of this world. The vegetables were home grown, and the pies home baked. I haven't eaten such tomatoes and corn in years.

Beyond Vincennes we crossed into Illinois and resisted the urge to stop off at the "Hinky Dinky Parley Voo" Cafe.

The roads aren't marked very well in southern Illinois, but despite the fact night had overtaken us, there was no mistaking where we were. This is oil and gas country, and you can smell the gas wherever you go.

In many spots along the way, burning torches fueled by natural gas lit up the countryside. I've seen them many times—around Lima, Ohio, for example—but have never stopped to inquire about them. I assume that farmers burn off excess gas when it is not present in sufficient quantities to be marketed commercially. And if I'm wrong, I'll no doubt find a stack of letters on my desk when I return, telling me so.

"Let's stop at a tourist cabin tonight," suggested Walter. "Those swanky places you people pick make me sick."

He had complained about the Waldorf Astoria last year, when we were in New York. Like most 14-year-olds, he doesn't like getting horsed up to pass through the lobby en route to breakfast.

This time he found an ally in Bernice. "We're close enough to St. Louis," she decreed. "Find a motel and we'll finish the trip in the morning."

"Friend's Cabins" loomed up just past Flora, Ill. "They're filled up," I grumbled. "And besides, the owner is probably asleep by now."

But I drove in anyhow, and Owner Friend was johny-on-the-spot to greet us. "I have a nice double cabin that'll suit you fine," he said. "Nine dollars, in advance."

Our Host Friend turned out to be a spry young fellow looking forward to his 80th birthday with the detached air of a seasoned critic watching a high-school play. "Fellow doesn't know what to do with his money these days," he murmured. "You can't keep much of what you make, but my wife and me, we get along."

For $10,000 he put up a dozen cabins near his home, and he and his missus run them without any help.

"Do you have any permanent residents?" Bernice asked.

"Squatters?" he replied incredulously. "No sirree, wouldn't have them on the place. Let 'em stay a couple of days and they think the property is theirs. Nope, all we take is traveling men and tourists. Traveling men's the best."

We let it go at that, and hit the sack.

Subpena of Fihelly Advocated

By Drew Pearson

A tip to Senator Pepper on wire tapping:

Why not subpena John Fihelly, assistant to United States Attorney George Morris Fay?

You will find that the police lieutenant who practiced Russian wire-tap methods in the Nation's Capital was vacationing at Nags Head, N. C., when his police superiors began investigating him in August of last year for tapping the wires of Howard Hughes and others.

Fay

At that time Shimon received a mysterious phone call tipping him off as to what was happening. And he rushed back to Washington, where Assistant United States Attorney Fihelly told him he was under investigation.

In other words, Shimon knew that he was being investigated almost from the start. But the amazing fact is that the tip came from the United States Attorney's office, which is supposed to uphold the law, not violate it.

This little incident may help to explain why—a year later—United States Attorney Fay's office again demonstrated a touching regard for Shimon by delaying a grand jury investigation of his wire-tapping until the statute of limitations had almost expired.

Attack on Johnson

Big guns in the Democratic Party led by Speaker Sam Rayburn are hot on the trail of Secretary of Defense Louey Johnson. They know that Johnson is passing out information to the Republicans against Dean Acheson and United States foreign policy generally. The men he is working through are Senators Brewster of Maine and Wherry of Nebraska, two of Truman's bitterest opponents . . . Therefore, Johnson will soon feel the full force of Senator Lyndon Johnson's new "Truman Committee," which will make a thorough investigation of our military setup and lower the boom on Louey sometime after elections. Don Cook of the SEC will be chief counsel and will play his part well . . . Johnson is so bitter at Acheson that when he appeared before closed-door Senate Foreign Relations Committee hearings, he looked around the room and inquired mockingly: "Is there anyone from the State Department listening"? Again he snarled: "This is not the diplomat speaking, but the military."

Churchill on War

Here is the inside story behind Winston Churchill's stirring demand for a unified Western European army. Before he made it, he told Paul Reynaud, former Prime Minister of France, that he is certain war with Russia will come before Christmas of 1951 and the West will lose all of Europe six weeks after the first shot is fired unless his plan is adopted. Churchill drew much applause but no support from the British government.

Congratulations to the three Secretaries of the Army, Navy and Air Force for their friendly teamwork. Sitting around the table, they work out mutual problems before passing them on to Secretary of Defense Johnson. This has done away with the interservice bickering that used to take place in Johnson's office. As a result, unification is now working better than ever.

The Army is having trouble buying parts for its equipment—because most manufacturers are still catering to private business. The Army can't get delivery on resistors for nine months because civilian orders have priority. Yet resistors are essential for walkie-talkies and tank radios, badly needed in Korea. Dupont has also held up a large order of wire by raising prices on the wire covering. So the entire order now has to be renegotiated.

Housing expediter Tighe Woods will ask Congress to restore his wartime power to control rents. He wants authority to slap new controls on critical housing areas and to nullify the action of cities already decontrolled. Woods' recommendations are now on their way to Congress via the Budget Bureau.

It will be denied but Secretary Acheson is seriously thinking of resigning after the first of January even though President Truman wants him to stay on. The terrific strain of directing foreign policy plus McCarthy's vicious attacks have made Acheson look 10 years older. Doctors forced him to go on a complete two-week vacation, which has helped. But many friends fear he won't be able to stand the pace.

Johnson's Special Agent

Such hilarious reports have come back to the Capital regarding Senator Harry Cain's comic opera trip across Europe as "the special agent of the Secretary of Defense," that Secretary Johnson recently complained to President Truman:

"But he isn't my representative. I never authorized him to go to Europe for me."

No wonder Johnson is worried over the way Cain poses as his "special agent."

The Senator from Washington, dressed in the uniform of a reserve colonel, recently lined up a group of generals and United States diplomats in Germany. And waving a finger under the nose of a two-star general he demanded, "Now, what's your problem?"

The generals eyes popped. Not wanting to be discourteous he mumbled something about lack of adequate reserves.

Vegetarian Bird Turns Up His Toes After Worm Diet

"Chirper", the little mockingbird that was the pride of Bethesda's Hazelwood dr., is dead. He had been fed too rich a diet.

He was adopted by the neighborhood after he fell from his nest two weeks ago. But Monday morning he lay lifeless in his little box at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert S. Thomas, jr., 8516 Hazelwood dr., Bethesda. Chirper is buried in the backyard under a little tree.

According to his foster mother, Mrs. Oliver S. Boswell, jr., 8518 Hazelwood dr., Chirper had been fed worms, but the Monday-morning experts say that he should have been given oranges, nectarines and seedless raisins. He was meant to be a vegetarian, she said.

His demise nipped in the bud what might have been a career as an entertainer. Chirper was due to be on television this week.

She's a warm little number with a sunny disposition . . . but decidedly cool to people who don't send their blankets, slip covers, and draperies to our experts for cleaning. This purty predictor plots quite a curve, doesn't she?
